

When our chief pilots tried out Boeing's 727 not long ago, we got different reactions. Captain McNames (above) found it a most relaxing flight and (below) Captain Tadlock worked for his passage.

Shenandoah shrouded with cold rains.

who am I?

Just a "Harmless Hitchhiker!"

So she says...Harmless looking? Yes...Like the fruits,  plants,  and meats  that "Miss Bug"  hides in. That's why the U. S. Department of Agriculture  uses this tricky female  to remind travelers  not to bring back foreign fruits,  plants,  and meats  that often hide destructive "hitchhiking"  foreign bugs. You see, once in the U. S., these bugs  destroy millions $000 of ($) dollars worth of crops,  livestock,  forests,  and ornamental shrubs.

Name the Bug!

CONTEST RULES

The airlines of the United States are cooperating with the Department of Agriculture in a campaign to alert U.S. visitors and returning residents to the dangers of transporting bugs in food or plants. To tell the story, Agriculture has created a symbol, the little lady hitchhiker. But she needs a name. To help her find one, the Air Transport Association is sponsoring a contest for airline employees. Just fill in the clipping. Send it off—and as many others as you want to. First prize is a $100 U.S. Savings Bond; second prize, a $50 bond; and third prize, a $25 bond. The deadline is March 15, 1966.

(Clip along dotted line and mail as indicated)

MAIL TO: Name-the-Bug Contest
 Air Transport Association Date _____
 1000 Connecticut Avenue, N.W.
 Washington, D.C. 20036

MY name for the bug is _____

NAME _____

AIRLINE _____

ADDRESS _____