deaths

Fred C. Briggs, Captain, ATL, died recently at the age of 44. He had been with Piedmont 14 years. He is survived by his wife and two children.

W. C. (Bill) Clark, Jr., superintendent of ground operations, INT, died March 12 of a heart attack while on business in Roanoke.

Clark, 63, had been with Piedmont since April 1948, the year Piedmont Airlines was organized. During his 33 years with the Company, he was involved in opening many new stations, and supported and participated in putting new aircraft as well as new types of aircraft into service.

Clark began his career as an agent in Asheville, where he was named station manager in 1949. In 1951, he transferred to Charleston, WV, as station manager, and a year and a half later, became manager at Tri-Cities.

Clark moved to Washington, D.C., in 1955 where he was station manager for the next seven years. He was promoted to division station supervisor in 1962 at Tri-Cities. The following year, he became superintendent of ground operations in Winston-Salem. He is survived by his wife.
