

From a post-War maintenance hangar to a modern passenger terminal, the main floor of USAir's new terminal is a virtual visual showcase of natural light and geometric forms (top).

DCA station personnel most likely will be astounded by the amount of work space their new environment will provide (left).

Attached and to the north of the temporary terminal is Hangar 12 where a Piedmont B727 is in for line maintenance (right).