emphasize vocational subjects. A special group in vocation work will be started in the schools of the reservation this fall. Special attention will be given to instruction in arts and crafts.

"The National Park should mean a great deal to the Indians," said Mr. Focht. "We are recognizing the educational system to take advantage of this. We want to develop Cherokee arts and crafts to the point where they will be considered real Indian art. As it has been, pottery made by the Cherokees was of a pattern borrowed from the Catawba Indians, and the weaving of basketry were borrowed from the white people of the mountains. We want to make the arts and crafts genuinely Cherokee and we want the articles to be colorful, attractive, and of high quality. We plan to study the Indian folk lore and to create artistic patterns with figures symbolic of Cherokee traditions and lore."

ATLANTIC CHRISTIAN HAS FINE OPENING

Over Three Hundred Students On Hand for 33rd Session

Wilson, Sept. 10.—Atlantic Christian College opened its doors to over 300 students Monday and according to Dr. H. S. Hilley, the school's president, the brightest future in the history of the college is before it. Students from Virginia, Kentucky, Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama and of course, all over North Carolina flocked to the registration office Monday to sign up for the different courses the college offers.

A new face greeted the incoming students Monday in the person of Cecil Jarmen, new dean of men, who was a member of the 1928 class at the college and received his B. D. degree at Yale University last June.

Convocation ceremonies will be held Wednesday night at the Methodist Church here which Rev. Dr. Geo. W. Perry will direct. On Friday night at 8 o'clock a reception will be held at the Christian Church for those new students and all of the old ones who are attending the college this year.

New additions have been made to the school during the summer just past such as doubling the space of the library and placing a new brick terrace along the front of the girls' dormitory. A new gymnasium is nearing completion, also, and it was announced Monday that this last addition to the college buildings will be in readiness for the opening of the basketball season in the late fall.

This is the 33rd year for Atlantic Christian College.
