can see his way clear in the future to giving more support than he has in the past to the program for recovery which the President is urging upon the Congress. President Roosevelt himself has been frank to say that these are times when emergency plans must be devised and put into operation, and that in seeking the way to recovery he may make mistakes. Mr. Bailey may make mistakes, too. Neither he nor the President is endowed at this time of darkness with perfect wisdom. But the people feel that the President is making an intelligent and vigorous effort to secure those measures which will bring to an end the present chaos in our economic life. And the people know that there is no other program which promises half so much. North Carolinians hope that Senator Bailey can find it in his heart to give his great abilities and his loyalty to his leader in a time of national emergency and distress. "With great respect and with utter friendship" The News and Observer believes that in following his course of political independence today Mr. Bailey is making a mistake. More than that, they believe that he is losing an opportunity to serve his country at a time of emergency when his President and his country need his abilities and his service.

Weekly Sport REVIEW

(Murray M. Klein)
Detroit, home of the automobile industry, is also the foremost sport metropolis of the nation. From the environs of this city come Joe Louis, the World Champion Detroit Tigers, Detroit Lions, and Detroit Red Wings.
Joe Louis, dusky heavyweight sensation and foremost challenger for the crown, calls the motor city his home. Although born in Alabama, Joe grew up in Detroit and it was here that he got his start. He fought as an amateur boxer here and piled up a commendable record. Two Detroit sportsmen, Julian Black and John Roxborough, took a fancy to the lad and engaged Black Blackburn, famous old-timer, to tutor the lad. Under the guidance of the cagey vet Joe advanced with rapid strides. One by one victims fell beneath his dynamite laden fists. Soon they began to take notice of this 19 year old Detroit lad. When his skein of victories had reached twenty-one, seventeen via the knock-out route, they matched him with Primo Carnera, former world's champion. Inside of six rounds, Joe had Primo hooking like the side of raw beef, and the fight was stopped. Next they fed him King Levinsky, Chicago battler. Louis disposed of the King in little over two minutes. People began to clamor for a Louis-Baer bout, and it was finally secured. Now, they thought we'll see how good this boyish upstart is. The Detroit Dynamiter convinced the skeptics beyond a shadow of doubt, when he knocked the California Clown in four rounds.

Now they've got him matched with Max Schmelling, one time heavy champ. But now the skeptics are a little less enthusiastic in their doubts.
In the baseball field the flivver city has the Detroit Tigers. Led by Hank Greenberg, Schoolboy Rowe, and Mickey Cochrane, the Tigers won their second consecutive American League pennant and followed it with a victory over the Chicago Cubs in the World Series.
The Lions, professional football champs, also claim Detroit as their home town. Led by their able captain and quarter-back, Dutch Clark, the Lions swept through the western half of the western half of the pro league. In the playoff they annihilated the strong New York Giants by a 28-0 score.
Last, but not least, come the Detroit Red Wings. The Red Wings, possessing one of the youngest teams in the league, played some of the finest hockey seen in many a day, and ended up in possession of the Stanley Cup, symbolic of hockey supremacy.

So, for this year at least, we doff our hats to Detroit, sport center of the United States.
