Chapel Hill Group Adopts Resolutions Of Protest By Huge Majority

(By G. de R. Hamilton, Jr.)

Chapel Hill, May 12.—The! faculty of the University of North Carolina went on record here to night as overwhelmingly opposing the abolition of the school of engineering in Chapel Hill and the consolidation of all engineering work at State College in Raleigh.

The protest was recorded as the faculty, by a poll of the full professors, voted to transmit to the Board of Trustees resolutions against the proposal of President Frank P. Graham, once approved by the trustees, to abolish the engineering school here in favor of one school at State College. The vote on the motion was 80 to 19.

Incorporated in the 'resolutions were the suggestions of the faculty as to proper method of handling the engineering school problem.

were the suggestions of the faculty as to proper method of handling the engineering school problem. The faculty recommended to the trustees that one school of engineering, under one dean or board of governors, be established, but that it have divisions both here and in Raleigh, with the two schools carrying on work they are best fitted for, at prese the The vote on the question came early tonight after 300 members of the faculty had debated for close to seven hours, in meetings yester—

University Consolidation

There has never been any sentiment in North Carolina for the consolidation of the three major colleges in this State.

The consolidation was recommended by the Brooking Institution, which was purely the creation and servant of the administration that hired them in North Carolina.

There was no sentiment for it among the alumni, the faculty, or the people of North Carolina, yet the Governor with his strong central power was able to push this law through without there being any sentiment for it in North

We do not believe there should be any criticism attached to Dr. Graham for trying to put the law into effect. He has only been doing what the law requires him to do. The act of the Legislatures was not the creation of his mind, it was the child of Brooking's Institution and Governor

The action of the faculty of the University of North Carolina occasions no surprise. North Carolina is large enough to have these three colleges. The one at Chapel Hill; the one at Raleigh; the one at Greensboro existing each in their own right rather than trying to exist as a mythical union of coordination.
