ROYALTY COMES HIGH

News and Observer

Royalty comes high but our British cousins seem to appreciate it so highly that they are willing to pay the bill—at least most of them appear to be, even though they themselves are poor.

The total cost of royalty is four hundred and ten thousand pounds annually, with provision for an increase of fifteen thousand pounds when Princess Elizabeth becomes of age. In the meantime the Duke of Gloucester has his income increased from twenty-five thousand pounds to thirty-five thousand pounds, the additional ten thousand pounds being for looking after the business affairs of Elizabeth. The provision for the King's mother remains at seventy thousand pounds.

Mind you, this figure represents pounds, not dollars. Some of the Labor leaders suggested "greater simplicity" for George VI, whereupon Winston Churchill offered the following substitute, which was adopted: "The ancient usages and ceremonies centering upon the Crown have become, even more than in former times a bulwark against dictatorship and a symbol of the union of all members of the British Commonwealth of Nations, we hereby affirm we do not desire any change in the style and establishment of the sovereign and his family." Those who dance must pay the fiddler!

NATIONAL P. T. A.

The National Congress of Parent Teacher Associations meeting in Richmond, Va., urged parents to "abolish such forces for corruption as the tavern where young people may buy liquor, pool rooms or shops where slot machines and other forms of gambling are permitted; soft drink parlors with curtained booths; moving picture houses with low grade pictures and bank nights." The organization, realizing the folly of a "don't" program, urged that parents support such character-forming agencies as the Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A. Community houses and other spiritual and cultural organizations.

A project was launched at the conference opposing toy fire arms for children. To keep such toys from the children would aid in reducing the prevailing gangster idea think the promoters, and education cannot begin too early against such ideas.

It is rather significant when parents all over the nation join in a movement to outlaw a drag and a menace to society. The home is the basic vantage point from which to wage war upon the enemies of the welfare of children in any community.

FOR CHILDREN ONLY

Oxford Ledger

The founding fathers of our public school system never intended that it become a child of politics.

The public schools are designed primarily for the benefit and usefulness of children, not the parents of the children or the administrators of the system.

Three union organizers report being escorted out of Morehead City by a committee of business men but the Mayor of the resort city denies the allegation. That labor has overstepped its rights in some regions is no excuse for banishment of those who have violated no law. The rights of man should be respected.—Oxford Ledger.

CAN'T GO

The United States Department of Commerce has refused permission for the proposed air race across the Atlantic to commemorate the Lindbergh flight. Col. Monroe Johnson, speaking for the Department states that such races were considered extra hazardous.

QUITTING

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Willis Van Devanter has notified President Roosevelt that he intends to retire from the supreme Court bench on June 2. This will reduce by one the number of so-called conservatives, and may have an effect on the court fight.
