THE CROP CONTROL ISSUE

Wikin Tribune

The North Carolina Grange, meeting in Winston-Salem recently had the opportunity of hearing a speaker favorable to compulsory crop control and one who is not favorable, and then decided to vote neither way on the issue.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace presented the administration viewpoint, and Senator Bailey gave his reasons for opposing compulsory control. And in the course of his remarks, the North Carolina Senator is quoted as having said that he will not vote for compulsory control, "although there is more sentiment for it here than perhaps any other State in the nation."

That statement alone is significant because it shows that Senator Bailey subscribes to the theory that when people elect their representatives to Congress their commission him to rely solely upon his own good judgment and let it go at that. And really there is a school of thought that runs along that line, but there is another that holds that a representative should represent, which manifestly the Senator is not doing when he says that although he knows the sentiment of his people is for compulsory crop control he will vote against it.

Senator Bailey has presented his argument on the issue time and again, and by his own acknowledgment he has not been able to convince his constituents. Being the servant of those who sent him to Washington, to our way of thinking, he should respect their wishes in matters that do not challenge his integrity.

Be that as it may, both Secretary Wallace and Senator Bailey present plausible argument for their respective sides on this issue. Senator Bailey presents an alternative program of "inducements to induce farmers to produce fewer soil depleting crops," and offers the "export bounty" plan as the most rational and cheapest solution to the farm problem in the South. Maybe he is right, considering cotton farming as a whole, but we wager that under the export bounty plan the small cotton farmer would be left holding the bag.

FOR ECONOMY AND YET FOR SPOILS

Williamston Enterprise

Much talk has been heard about economy up Washington way during the past few weeks, and there is no mistake about the people wanting economy. There is need, no doubt, for economy. Our own senator, Mr. Josiah Bailey, says one billion dollars must be lopped off expenditures during the period ending about a dozen months from now.

Those who have been demanding economy apparently want the other fellow to bear the burden that any reduction may effect. They have not said much about the billion dollars the spoils system costs this nation each year. The expenditures made by the government at the direction of congressman-senator to procure and hold votes are seldom mentioned in their pleas for economy. The elimination of overlapping bureaus, and they are many in our government, can not be effected just because of the spoils-infected group that hovers close under the Capitol Dome.

The loud clamor for economy centers around those appropriations advanced for relieving human suffering, the wants of mankind. These appropriations must be stopped even if such action reduces our people to hunger and actual want.

Certainly there is a golden opportunity to even effect economy in the relief ranks, but this economy will be ignored. The politically hand-picked worker in the relief business will continue to hold his job while the unfortunate one—the one with no political pull but yet is in great need—is kicked out.

When the politician who should for economy begins to fire his hirelings and shows that he is for real economy, then there'll be economy. It may cost the senator-representative his job in the long run, but such action even though it leads to defeat, merits praise.

"THIRD TERM"

Emil Ludwig, eminent author, aptly expresses a point of view in his initial installment in "Liberty" of his biography "Life of Franklin D. Roosevelt," in which there is wide divergence of opinion.

"Emil Ludwig, predicts that the President may be elected to a third term if the 'great impending European War' breaks out before the 1940 elections.

Ludwig gives his views in a foreword to the biography. He denies the charge that the President is a "dictator" and declares that the Roosevelt administration represents "perhaps the last attempt to carry out the social revolution without resorting to force."

"Roosevelt's significance for us Europeans is greater than that of any preceding President except Lincoln and Wilson," he writes. "This is conditioned more by the world situation than by him. I believe that he holds in his hand the key to peace.

"But should the great impending European war break out during Roosevelt's administration, then his authority may be great enough, in the hour of danger, to elect him a third time. Otherwise at the end of three years he will resign his office, though by no means his activity. . . ."

"The sons of those Americans who are opposing Roosevelt today will perhaps some day erect a monument to him as the last of those who fought to preserve their system. One thing certain is that the sons of the poor, for whom he took up the fight, will not forget him. For at bottom what is at issue here is nothing other than rich and poor."

WHAT PRICE HASTE

Rotarian Magazine

As the year's best safety slogan, we would propose the following, gleaned from a message of Marshall De Motte to California Rotary Clubs:

"As ye would that others should drive toward you, Drive ye even so toward them." And for runner-up, this from the "Daily Transcript" of Holyoke, Massachusetts: "The car to watch is the car behind the car in front of you."

INSTANT HEAT

where you want it . . . with a PORTABLE HUMPHREY RADIANTFIRE

No. 14 Portable Humphrey Radiantfire

For baby's bath — for Grandma's nap — for the den, or basement or attic playroom — banish chill instantly with the healthful sunlike rays of a Portable Humphrey Radiantfire.

It's a great little heater. Sturdy. Strong. Yet light enough to be picked up and connected to any gas outlet. And a good gas filter can put connections where you want them with little trouble or cost.

Out on the sun porch it's as handy for the cool evening as an electric fan is for the hot one. In a cold kitchen, connect it up to the end of the range manifold, set it on the floor, a box, table, or shelf out of the way, and the problem is solved.

And keeping warm isn't the half of it. A supply of radiant infra-red heat to turn on whenever there's an ache or pain to be soothed is another valuable use for the Humphrey Portable.

The heater is 21" high with a heavy sheet steel base 8" x 10". Total weight of lbs. It is equipped for hose connection, a moving hose connection, it is ready for socket pipe connection. Finish is walnut brown with plated trimming to harmonize with other home furnishings. Come in and see it on display.
