SOUNDS MORE LIKE DICTATORSHIP

Williamston Enterprise.
For weeks the politicians were firing their guns for the November election, the Democrats talking about democracy and upbraiding the Republicans. The Republicans did not have so much to brag about in the way of accomplishments but it talked long and hard about what the Democrats had done.

After hearing much about true Democracy, one naturally turns to see the practical side of the strange thing. A look into the Eighth North Carolina Congressional District reflects something that looks more like dictatorship than democracy. Jumping across the Seventh, one finds a few men naming the man for Congress from the Sixth District. Legal, probably so, but the activities are hardly characteristic of that democracy so loudly proclaimed on the stump throughout the land just a few days ago.

LEAVES A SCAR

The Williamston Enterprise
A nominee for Congress in the Eighth District has been finally selected, ending a long quarrel and offering a lesson for those who preach a true democracy. The quarrel leaves a scar, one that the next democratic legislature should try to hide forever with a type of legislation that will cast out fraudulent practices at the polls throughout the State.

MR. BAILEY, MR. ICKES, MR. HOOVER

The Williamston Enterprise
All this quarrelling between Mr. Ickes, secretary of the Department of Interior, and Josiah Bailey, North Carolina's senior senator, is a bit confusing. Ickes may be wrong, but one thing is certain and that is Mr. Bailey is arguing more from the side of Mr. Hoover, the onetime standard bearer of the Republican party, than he is from the side of the Democratic party.

Mr. Ickes charges that our Mr. Bailey has been conspiring with Mr. Hoover for the presidential nomination on a Republican pattern. That's hard to believe, for more authoritative sources maintain that even the Republicans would not have Mr. Bailey. If Mr. Bailey has been conferring with Mr. Hoover, probably he was getting a few more facts about the Hoover cart, a vehicle that was frequently mentioned by the Senator when he was speaking in Martin County for re-election. There's another day coming, and Mr. Bailey is probably conferring with Mr. Hoover as to the prospects for a new Hoover cart model.

THE LOCAL TELEPHONE SERVICE

Scotland Neck Commonwealth
Not even the courteous and efficient service rendered by Mrs. Martha Herring for the telephone company can blind the eyes of the citizens of Scotland Neck to the exasperatingly inefficient service rendered by the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph company in this community. If the service in general measured up the standard set by Mrs. Herring, it would be excellent beyond comparison—but, unfortunately, it does not.

There is scarcely a week, it seems, when the wires are not all jazzed up, scores of phones are out of order or something has happened to render transmission weak and oftentimes unintelligible. If there were tremendous storms, the citizenship would understand, but on the clearest days the entire system seems to go haywire sometimes.

Citizens declare that before the dial system was installed here as an economy move the service was good. Now, the telephone company is profiting by use of dial system, and apparently is giving little thought to the demands of patrons. A few months ago the Kiwanis club protested vigorously in the name of the community, but the protest availed nothing.

It seems to us that if the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph company is not minded to give decent service in this community, the time has come to protest vigorously to the State Utilities Commission, which is supposed to see that these public service corporations function efficiently.

WAR FROM MARS

The other night the Columbia Broadcasting Company put on a skit taken from an H. G. Wells book. The gist of the action was that the United States was being attacked by enemies from the nearest four planet neighbors. The actors made it very realistic, it seems, and quite a goodly number of people were scared nearly out of their wits.

Now representations are being made to the Communications Commission to punish Columbia for this realistic broadcast. We doubt if the company will be seriously penalized. It has been shown that at frequent intervals an announcer stated that the skit was purely fictional.

Thereby might hang a long train of thought for the advertiser who uses radio. The American public, along with the rest of the world, listens carelessly. Hardly is it possible to get two people to correctly report even a short conversation or radio announcement unless record is made. That, as we see it from our more or less biased point, is the weakness of radio.

Radio officials might well reply that the public also reads very carelessly. Granted. But if little Johnie asks sister Betty what was the name of the picture the radio man said was to be at the Whoisit Theatre tonight, and neither can remember, that is just too bad. However, if Johnie has been equally careless in reading an announcement in the paper he merely gets the paper and looks it up.

The weakness of all such advertising is that the impression is fleeting, and even when the attention has been caught the interested customer cannot return to the ad, after reading the other six or seven pages, and sees just what it was that Brown and Company had advertised at such remarkably low prices. Radio and moving picture advertising is necessarily a series of fleeting impressions,—the newspapers make a record to which reference can be made.

SHALL WE INVITE THEIR MAJESTIES

It has been suggested that the King and Queen of England be invited to attend the San Francisco and New York expositions, to be held during 1939. And certainly, a visit of Their Majesties to this country would be a splendid gesture to a troubled world, illustrating as it would the firm friendship that exists between the two great English speaking democracies.

Furthermore, there is plenty of past precedent for such an invitation, and for its acceptance as well. The King and Queen recently paid a state visit to France, another of England's old friends and allies. And President Roosevelt, though he has not gone abroad since becoming Chief Executive, has visited South America and Canada in furthering his "good neighbor" policy. When the head of a major nation goes to a foreign land, sees and is seen by its people, the immensely important cause of better international understanding is substantially furthered.

The invitation to the King and Queen should come not only from officials of this government, but from the public as well—from editors in every section of the U. S.—who represent the millions of Americans who desire peace and friendship between nations. To these citizens, such a visit would not be a mere formal expression of good will. It would typify the genuine regard that exists between the United States and the British Empire. And next year, when untold numbers of people will go to New York and San Francisco for the expositions, is the logical time.

as far away as Iowa, others of Maryland, New Jersey, Florida, Indiana and still others to points in this State.

Starting its seventh season early last spring the boat has been sunk three times, but the accident this week was the first major one during recent years.

About 24 hours after the floating theatre struck the log and went to the bottom of the river, a Foreman and Blades Lumber Company barge struck the same object but without damage to the boat.

FLOATING THEATRE SINKS IN ROANOKE. BELOW JAMESVILLE

A sizeable hole torn through its bow, the Original Floating Theatre went to the bottom of the Roanoke River, about five miles below Jamesville early Sunday morning. No one was injured, the crew and cast of 32 persons scrambling to safety on top of the large boat as two tugs pushed it to a mud flat on the south side of the river. The boat, scheduled to dock in Williamston all the week, went down in about thirteen feet of water, leaving the after deck and roof of the theatre a few feet above the water line.

"We were traveling up the river very smoothly when the boat struck a submerged log in midstream and a member of the crew said, 'Sensing the danger immediately,' a member of the crew started listing immediately," a member of the crew said. "The danger, the tug boat captains immediately dropped back to the side of Monday for their homes, some go the showboat and pushed her on the mud flat in about five minutes," he continued, explaining that members of the cast hardly had time to escape with their lives. Nothing was saved from the muddy waters, the show cast and boat crews holding to places on the roof, missing breakfast while food and canned goods floated from the submerged kitchen. Several deserted the boat, but most of the players remained aboard until Monday when they gathered together what personal effects they could and made plans to leave for their homes scattered over nearly a dozen states.

Monday morning, the players and crew leisurely passed the hours waiting developments, unofficial reports stating that the owner, Mrs. Nina Howard, of St. Michaels, Md., would possibly make no attempt to reopen the show this season.

Soon after the boat went down, Mrs. Howard started making plans to salvage the theatre. A diver was employed in Norfolk Monday and salvage operations were scheduled to get underway Wednesday. Official estimates indicated that more than $5,000 would be required to raise the boat and repair the damage to the equipment. Efforts will be made to float the boat within a week, but a month or more will be required for repairing the damage to equipment and stage scenery, it was learned.

Until the salvage operations are completed, there will be no show boat in existence, members of the crew explaining that the sunken property was the original and last boat of its kind in existence.

The players started leaving late Tennessee, Virginia, New York,
