"Fight the good fight
of faith, lay hold on eternal life."
I Tim. 6:12

Fighting is an ugly business, and war is indescribably bad, but often we must fight or live a life that is worse than death. "I must fight if I would win," sang the hymnist. Obviously physical combat is not meant in the hymn, or in the advice of St. Paul to Timothy in the words of our text. A valiant struggle against sin and the attractively posed evils is clearly necessary each day. The fight is not solely a defense of the citadel of truth, but an aggressive attack upon the enemies of our souls and the common good. The good fight is a battle royal against every foe which stands between us and the Eternal Life. We dare not sheathe the sword until "the battle's done and the victory's won."

PRAYER

"Strong Son of God, Immortal Love," arm us with jealous care for the battles that must be fought and won within the area of personality and against the menacing evils of the world today. May we be so completely armed and so thoroughly fortified from within that we shall neither give nor ask for quarter, but in the end may we triumph gloriously. In the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

ASSEMBLY AND MAILING AGENTS - THE ENTIRE TARBORO ROTARY CLUB

EDITOR'S CORNER:

On March 5th the Rotary Club and the Home Front News parted with one of their finest members. He was none other than Lee D. Hargrove, charter Rotarian and one who lived its principles. Lee was never more happy than when assisting in getting the news to you. A veteran of the last war, he saw service in France. He really knew the value of news from home, as you do. Lee was the manager of F. S. Royster Mercantile Company here, succeeding the late C. A. Johnson. He was a Mason, a man interested in the development of his community, a loyal churchman, and one who knew no enemies. His splendid wife, the former Minnie Savage, survives him along with two brothers, Walter and Frank. So we stand at attention while a genuine salute is fired to a real veteran who went out at attention.
