"AWAY ALL BOATS"

Like the great sweep of the South Pacific itself, Universal-International's "Away All Boats!", the saga of an amphibious war seen through the eyes of one skipper from the deck of one attack transport will smash across the screen of the Galax Theatre, Sun-Mon-Tues, 19-20-21.

The skipper is Jeff Chandler, and the battle-scarred ship is the U.S.S. Belinda of the best-selling Kenneth M. Dodson novel which comes to the screen with all the dynamic grandeur that VistaVision and Technicolor can give it.

In a long career of hard-hitting roles Chandler has never been better suited to a portrayal than that of Capt. Jebediah Hawks, the rugged veteran of a dozen ocean campaigns who builds a raw crew of officers and men into the toughest and most efficient amphibious team in the South Pacific.

There is not space enough to tell of the many pulsating performances in the giant cast, but outstanding among them is George Nader as Boat Group Commander. In "Away All Boats!", Nader takes another big step toward top stardom in he-man roles.

A close second to Nader are three portrayals which will be long remembered as the Belinda fights its way from Pearl Harbor across danger-ridden South Pacific waters. These are Lex Barker as Chandler's executive officer, Richard Boone as a ship's lieutenant, and Keith Andes as a ship's surgeon.

The lone female of the cast is Julie Adams playing the role of George Nader's wife, hoping through a long war that her man will return safely to her.

There is one other outstanding star of "Away All Boats!", one that will never be forgotten in real life by the men who trod her decks nor by audiences who watch her take the worst beating that any victorious ship ever took at the hands of a ruthless enemy. This is the U.S.S. Belinda, the pen name which author Dodson gave the ship he actually served on as executive officer through the battles he described which have been so vividly tran-
