rooms and massive stone fireplace provide background for interesting flower arrangements. Handsome old laurel and rhododendron shelter an open porch. From grass terraces contained by old stone walls, one enjoys a far view across Horse Cove to mountain ranges beyond.

3. Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr.: Country Club
 The Swiss Chalet home of Mrs. Clark Howell is set among grand old trees. Here an artist has painted a glorious picture with specimen boxwood, a wealth of flowers, ferns and small blossoming trees. On the estate is a tiny, stone barn that is a delight to the eye.

4. Mr. and Mrs. William C. Caye: Country Club
 The modern colonial home of Mr. and Mrs. Caye overlooks Sequoyah Lake. It is charming in plan and decor. The site, that slopes from road to lake, is beautifully landscaped. Steps and paths descending around the house, are bordered by colorful plantings of shrubs and both wild and garden flowers. A broad flagstone terrace stands above a naturally wooded area with a lovely view of the lake below. There, refreshments will be served.

 year in the eight locations to be visited. From mountain top panoramas to lake and valley vistas, each house depicts a different facet of living in the beautiful Highlands area.

Tour A will include the homes of:
 1. Col. and Mrs. James H. Howe: No. 1 Walking Stick Road, Horse Cove.
 The name of this delightful house derives from an Indian legend, relating the search by Chief Walking Stick for an ideal place in which to settle his people. Col. and Mrs. Howe, like the old Chief before them, chose for their home an eminence in beautiful Horse Cove, surrounded by an impressive circle of mountains. The dark rampart of Black Rock Mt. lifts beyond broad fields in one direction, the softly wooded slopes of Big and Little Fodderstack in another. The Howes, as N.C. "tree farmers", have planted 15,000 pines on their broad acres. Interesting in the house, are old family portraits, and handsome antiques in a living room of great charm.

2. Mrs. Elizabeth Cates Wall: The Bowery Road
 Mrs. Wall has made of one of the older houses in the area, a serene summer home. The spacious central hall, large

Tour B will include these homes:
 1. Mr. and Mrs. George V. Zumft: Old Walhalla Road
 The home of Mr. and Mrs. Zumft, at the base of Satulah, is attractively furnished with antiques. Mrs. Zumft is a skilled gardener and displays great artistry in her flower arrangements. One entire room in the house is dedicated to another hobby, a unique collection of owl figurines. Of interest are the draperies, especially woven to carry out the owl motif. An area equipped for outdoor cooking adds to the charm of this house.

2. Mr. and Mrs. Hal. S. Dumas: Cowee Mt.
 A pleasant drive in from Cashiers Road brings you to "Cowee Gap", the delightful home of Mr. and Mrs. Dumas, with its spectacular panoramic view over Cashiers Valley to range upon range of mountains. Along the paths and in the borders the charm of native plants and ferns is enhanced by careful blending with cultivated plants.

3. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Cook: White-side Road
 "Ridgecrest", the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cook, is set in a sweep of broad
