"THE SHEEPMAN"

Glenn Ford, who has scored in both action dramas and comedies, combines the two in his latest M-G-M picture, "The Sheepman," co-starring Shirley MacLaine, with Leslie Nielsen, Mickey Shaughnessy and Edgar Buchanan heading the supporting cast.

"The Sheepman" offers something new in the way of early-day Westerns. Telling the story of a seemingly mild but fast-gun sheepman who invades the hostile cattle country of the 1880's, its action is replete with fist fights, gun battles, horsemanship and the menace of an entire community against a single man—but added to this is a large slice of humor in characterizations and plot situations.

Jason Sweet, central figure of "The Sheepman," portrayed by Glenn Ford, is no ordinary Western hero. When he comes to the town of Powder Valley, determined to bring his sheep into the cow country, his laconic responses to threats and his tongue-in-cheek sallies have the town toughs guessing as to what manner of man he could be.

Ford, of course, is no stranger to comedy, having achieved two of his biggest hits in "Don't Go Near the Water" and "The Teahouse of the August Moon." His most recent dramatic vehicle was "Cowboy."

A CinemaScope and color picture, the outdoor drama was filmed on location at Montrose, Colorado, in the San Juan Range of the Colorado Rockies.

"The Sheepman" plays at the Galax Theatre on Tuesday, August 26.
