EXPANSION PLANS AT WCC CON'T
years, Western Carolina will become one of the largest and most flourishing colleges in the state.

I, as a present student at WCC, have conflicting emotions about this new program. I am naturally greatly pleased and excited about the progress of the college I chose to attend, but I am sorry that I will not be around to enjoy the full benefits of the program as it is completed (especially the proposed new dramatics center). I will only see the beginning of the first stage next year with the addition of two new dormitories for women being constructed now. These two included with additional ones will make a total of 10 new dormitories by 1980 as well as a new auditorium, academic building, a 200-unit housing development for married students, a student union building, a cafeteria, an infirmary, a heating plant, a laundry and a stadium----all new.

The project planners, Roy B. Campbell assisted by WNCRPC Director John Hampton of Asheville, directed the program to maintain the high standards among students, staff and physical facilities, keeping each expanding area functional as the work progresses. Western Carolina College plays an important role in the lives of the people of this area as well as in the lives of those who come from out of state. It has reached a critical milestone in its development in 1960 with an already changing and growing program broadening to greater and better promise for the future.

Founded in 1889 as Western Carolina Teacher's College, it was dedicated to teacher education. Now the curriculum emphasis has widened to include a balanced liberal arts program in equal position to education. The present enrollment is 1,673 and if it continues to increase each year at the present rate it will reach a maximum of 4,000 by 1981. The three major stages of the expansion program are based on this increase, reaching levels of achievement to coincide with expected enrollment---2,300 by 1966; 2,800 by 1971 and 4,000 by 1981.

There is one phase of expansion that affects present and former students in an unpleasant way--the passing of old landmarks. It is rather sad to see old familiar faces torn down to make way for new construction. By the time Stage III is reached we alumni will hardly know our WCC, for many of the old haunts will either be gone or changed and almost unrecognizable. Joyner's ivied walls will fall for the new student building site and we all breath a heavy sigh to think its going down--some of the charm of the old campus will be lost with the tearing down of such picturesque structures. However, as President Kennedy

SYLVIA RETURNS

Miss Sylvia Nutrizion, whose beauty salon is located over Anderson's Variety Store, has returned for the summer and is now open for appointments.

Miss Nutrizion specializes in scientific care of skin and scalp. She has been working this past winter in Southern Pines, N. C. with her own special formula Trez, skin and scalp lotion. She hopes to locate a laboratory in Southern Pines next year because of the great success she has had there in treating special cases of skin and scalp disease.
