POET RETURNS

The 1961 Anthology of College Poetry included selections by four Western Carolina College students including a poem by Misw Ella Cabe that appeared in the Galax News last summer, HAZE. Selections appearing in this publication of the National Poetry Association were made from more than 150,000 entries from all sections of the United States. Miss Cabe will be attending summer school at Western Carolina this summer, and will complete requirements for graduation early next year. For the past two summers, Miss Cabe has been Co-Editor of the Ga lax News, and has written many beautiful poems and interesting features for our paper. Throughout the summer, we hope to publish some more of her works.

The following is a poem submitted by Miss Cabe:

NO_ONE

I am alone.
I am always alone.
My heart cries out,
My hand reaches out
But grows still

I turn, I run,

in empitness.

I climb a hill
A never-ending hill,
Struggling to reach the heights
The hazy, intangible heights
But my feet falter

in uncertainty.

I reach a level plain.

An unknown fragrance fills the air I strive to inhale,
 To fill my being
 With wisps of nothingness...

What is real? What is unreal
In the floating shadows of life?

What do we seek?

Where are we running and why?

I am alone. But not alone
My struggle is timeless.

Each solitary soul cries out
Within a tightening net
Tangled inextricably in confusion.

The soul of man knows no-one.
