on the Wilcox property on Billy Cabin. The design of Herbert C. Millkey, architect of Atlanta, transformed the barn into an impressive structure of redwood and native stone. Individuality, serenity and dignity are evidenced by the lovely mountain home.

The entrance hall is flagged with Tennessee marble which continues into the living-dining room. Hanging in the hall is an unusual batik of one of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, made in San Magiel, Mexico.

The spacious living room, with its massive exposed beams, features three types of wood which presents the friend-

ANNUAL HUDSON LIBRARY SILVER TEA AT WILCOX HOME--YOU ARE INVITED TEA TO BE HELD ON TUESDAY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilcox, to be the location of the annual Hudson Library Silver Tea on August 24th, is perhaps one of the most beautiful, as well as unique homes in this area.

The house was originally an old barn ly warmth always provided by natural wood. Chestnut, cut off the property, is impressively used for the huge bay doors and clerestory windows. The room is paneled in matched teak and the furniture is walnut. The fireplace, which extends across the full length of the south end of the living room, is constructed of native stone and teak, the stone being quarried on the property. At each side of the elevated hearth of hand cut Tennessee marble are towering brass candlesticks, a product of Mexico City.

The bedroom wing and library are a part of the original barn and all are decorated with the warm color scheme seen throughout the house.
