PATRIOTISM

Christians have always been taught the duty of patriotism. Our Lord knew that Caesar had a role to play in the world and that citizens owed loyalty and support to the empire.

St. Paul wrote, ". . . I urge that petitions, prayers, intercessions and thanksgivings be offered for all men; for sovereigns and all in high office, that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in full observance of religion and highstandards of morality." (I Tim. 2:1-2, N.E.B.)

It must be remembered, however, that Caesar is not always content to be limited to his role. The governments of the world are not always willing to settle for loyalty and support, but seek, rather, to gain man's total commitment.

Christians have a difficult vocation, therefore, in relation to the state. We ought to be patriotic, loving our homeland with generosity and conviction. We ought not, though, to fall into the trap of saying, "My country, right or wrong!"

When our country is wrong, it is the Christian's job to try to change things because he loves the land so much that he will not settle for anything less than the best. His duty to God requires that he do his duty to his country by rejecting a thoughtless and total commitment to it.

Other Christians in other countries have similar obligations. Our love for America, our concern for its welfare, ought not to obscure the fact that a Frenchman's love and concern for France is right and proper, even though this may lead to conflict with our plans and policies.

As we remember the total claim God has upon us and attempt to respond to that claim, the other legitimate demands upon us may be properly ordered. The Christian patriot is one who has discerned that order, (CON'D, PAGE 20)
