NOTES FROM BREVARD MUSIC CENTER

If last season was any indication of things to come, this season should be the most impressive as well as the most successful in the thirty-one year history of Brevard Music Center. The Brevard Music Festival, as in 1966, will run a full seven week-ends during the 1967 season, featuring internationally renowned musicians.

Heading the first Festival week-end this year will be the Festival Opera Theater of New York under the direction of George Schick and the appearance of famed mezzo-soprano Rosalind Elias with the Brevard Music Center Orchestra.

The Festival opens on Friday evening, July 7, with an all-Beethoven program. Lee Luvisi, pianist, Emil Raab, violinist, and Hans Schmettau, cellist--all three artists-in-residence at the Center this year---will be heard as soloists. They will be accompanied by the Brevard Music Center Orchestra under the Center's Artistic Director, Henry Janiec.
