Speaking, Dr. Wickey discussed the place of the Church-related ollege in "such a time as this." He said there has been a subtle suggestion through the years that the church-related college will dis appear, but that any college will isappear if it is not supported.

roduct worth the price? Do the asons of the past indicate that there is a position in our world for church-related colleges? What education? The church schools ing of education by teaching the tudent instead of the subject, and by having a student-centered not method-centered program.

Some people think an institution is not a college unless it has large and beautiful buildings. We have so verified quantity that we have forgotten quality! In vain we build a college unless the student also grows. The church-re lated colleges have awakened interest in higher education. The thurch has always been interested in education. 160 of the 182 colleges before the Civil War were church schools. The church established the first Junior College in America, not the state.
