Valuable Collection Donated To Library

An extensive gift of books from the estate of Mrs. Frank Taylor of Greenwich, Conn., has been presented to the C. L. Hardy Library of Atlantic Christian College. The material was given by the heirs to the estate, of whom Dr. Mildred Hartsock of the ACC English Department faculty was one.

The collection includes a great amount of classical literature, both English and American, as well as works on art and architecture, and history. Of particular value are the complete sets of many of the major writers: Thomas Carlyle, Lord Byron, Robert Louis Stevenson, Charles Dickens, Oscar Wilde, and others. In addition, there is an 1896 edition of Grimm's Life of Michaelangelo, and an early edition of Faure's History of Art.

The Librarian, Otis Coefield, expressed his pleasure with the gift and stated that many of the works, now long out of print, cannot be located except in private collections.

No Show

The Executive Board was unable to hold its regular meeting last Monday night because a quorum was not present. As a result, no regular business could be conducted.

Dean Bennett had an announcement for those members who were there. He stated that the Central Committee had passed a resolution which said that all student activities taking place in the lobby of the Classroom Building must be cleared through the Dean of Students office. This resolution was adopted after complaints of the noise created during ticket sales and other activities had disturbed classes at their regular meeting times.

Scholastically candidates must have completed at least three semesters work at Atlantic Christian while maintaining a 3.0 (B) grade average. While the scholastic standard is carefully considered, the other requirements of good moral character, active interest in and support of the college, and the ability to lead others are of equal importance.

Inducted into the society were: Ruth N. Price of Selma; Diane Strickland of Zebulon; Hollis Glover of Goldsboro; Kathryn Lamm of Wilson; and Carol M. Summerlin of Wilson.

Ruth N. Price is wife of Gordon Price, 406 N. Pollock St., Selma.
