Milton Provides Speaker's Topic

JIM ABBOTT

"He was a politician, but he was a different breed of a politician than what we know today; he spoke from his heart." This is what one student had to say about last Tuesday's convocation speaker, Dr. Brooks Hayes. Dr. Hayes is a native of Arkansas, and is a Democrat. He ran for the Governorship of his state at the age of thirty; he lost that election but was soon elected to the United States Congress where he served for sixteen years. President Kennedy appointed him to be Assistant Secretary of State and he served President Johnson as a Special White House Assistant.

In 1965 he was sent to the United Nations as a member of U.S. delegation. Presently he is serving as the Director of the Ecumenical Institution at Wake Forest University.

Dr. Hayes centered his remarks around the topic of education and the relevance of modern education to contemporary society. At the outset he established his thesis based on the words of John Milton who once proclaimed that, "I count that a complete and generous education which fits one to perform skillfully, justly, and magnanimously all the offices of life in peace and war, and in public and private enterprises."

Commenting on the justice that Milton referred to, Dr. Hayes noted that, "all too often the people of the South tend to look at the world through the windows of our churches and sometimes we see only the beauty that is there and we fail to see the squalor and injustices of life." In his own personal experience Dr. Hayes observed that as he looks back over his life he notes that his most painful memories are those in which he recalls when he was not "just" one of his fellow human beings. He went on to say that in all of our relationships in life we have come to expect to be treated in "just" manner. At this point Dr. Hayes turned to the words of the modern theologian, Emil Bruner, who once remarked that, "all suffering is bitter, but suffering that is unjust is doubly bitter; suffering that is destiny unites us; suffering that is unjust divides us."

In regards to the role of the educator as administrator of justice Hayes noted that the, "educator is part of the great process of securing justice for our people and one of the tests of education is whether or not we are always concerned about administering justice."

On the topic of student protest Dr. Hayes said that it is not too early in our lives to oppose the establishment when we think its wrong; in our lives to oppose the establishment when we think its wrong; in fact it is one of our great privileges as American student: In an interview following his speech I asked Dr. Hayes if he advocated protest marches as an effective means of opposing the establishment. He said, "The groups may be right or wrong, but the important thing is that the process of voicing grievance be protected and that of course is basic in American life."

Dr. Hayes closed his remarks on a note of "love" and he urged that all students try to exhibit love in our own lives, whatever course they may take."

Carols Fill Wilson Gym

By JOHN STOUT

Last Tuesday's Christmas program completed the fall schedule of morning convocation. The program entitled "Music for Christmas" featured the A.C.C. Band under direction of Mr. William Duckworth, and the Atlantic Christian Chorus and Vocal Ensemble under the joint direction of Dr. James Cobb and Mr. Ross Albert.

The forty-five minute program was immediately brought to life by the A.C.C. Band in a delightful medley of gay Christmas tunes entitled "A Christmas Festival." The Chorus followed the band's performance with the merry Christmas tune, "Carol, Brothers, Carol." Next the Vocal Ensemble took the stage and filled the hall with Carols, meant to bring the Christmas spirit to one and all. This included such favorites as "Deck the Halls" and that traditional German folk carol "O Tannenbaum" (Oh Christmas Tree").

A. No. Your random sequence will be determined by the first drawing held after you become 19.

Q. Once I receive a random sequence number, will this number change from year-to-year as new drawings are held?

A. No.

Board To Investigate

The Executive Board met briefly on Monday, December 1 with seemingly no major business to consider. There were, however a few minor issues needing the executive stamp of approval.

A motion by Jeanette Norfolk would create a committee to study the problem of transportation to and from the clinics for students in need of medical attention beyond that afforded by the college infirmary. Miss Norfolk explained that for the resident student without a car there is no ready means of transportation. A person who is sick "doesn't feel like hunting up a ride," and some students can't afford a taxi. She pointed out the difficulties incurred by persons with injuries such as a sprained ankle which necessitate several trips to the clinic. The motion passed without opposition.

The other matter of business, also brought up by a sophomore, made a recommendation to the City of Wilson that signs "designed to guide motorists to our campus" be placed at strategic intersections on the perimeter of the city. Jim Abbot made the motion and explained that "the town is sort of confusing if you don't know it." He felt the signs would be of help to persons looking for the campus. This motion was also unopposed.
