

The views expressed on this page are not necessarily those of the faculty or administration at ACC.

Editor: Joyce Copeland; Business Manager: Gale Foss; Managing Editor, Joyce Clegg; Sports Editors, Kaye Hollowell and Ricky Stewart; Photographers: Ed Harris, Jim Lowery; Circulation Manager: Clifton Wood; Cartoonist: Sudi Parks; Staff: Jim Abbott, Celia Looney, Jan Whitley, Rosalind Matthews, Robin Stallard, Kinney Hart, Mike Hughes, Nancy Brinson, and Imogene Thomas.

Just In Case

The chaperone, the soft-hearted victims of ACC social regulation, is becoming a very rare creature to obtain. Each social function sponsored by and-or paid for by a recognized college organization. The problem is that there are not enough willing chaperones to go around. One keeps seeing the same faithful faces at every function.

The question is what purpose does the chaperone serve. The famous reply to this is "just in case." Just in case of what? Evidently there is very much to be afraid of because of the nearly impossible task of finding available victims.

Regulations require, "full-time faculty, administrators, sponsors of organizations, housemothers and spouse or date of full-time faculty and administrators when accompanying the full-time college employees," to serve as chaperones. Socials with less than 100 students require two chaperones, one of whom must be an employee. Both chaperones at a function of over 100 participants must be college employees.

A year or so ago a form was sent to eligible "candidates" for "student sitting" duties in order to find out who was willing to volunteer their services. A list of available chaperones was to be distributed to appropriate associations. The list was so minute the administration was embarrassed to print it.

It seems this fact is itself says a lot for the rules requiring organizations to seek out the professor or administrator and asking him to take his time and patience to hover over a group of college age students.

The majority of the college employees do not want to be chaperones and the student body has not asked to have chaperones, so why must chaperones be a necessity in order to hold a social function? These few faithfuls have not been able to stop "on the street" drinking in the past. If students are not allowed to drink during the function they are going to the streets to do so but this poses an entirely different problem. Most of the social functions hold no appeal for the chaperone and provide only a source of irritation for them (case in point, the Big Brother concert).

The answer to the chaperone problem must come in one of two ways. The administration must (1) open qualifications to any responsible adult or (2) eliminate the chaperone stipulation for social functions.

As long as the situation continues as it presently exists, no one is going to be happy. By the way, the students owe a large debt of gratitude to these soft-hearted souls who are always available for the thankless task.

Copyrighted material removed.

Through The Looking Glass

Thumbing through the Collegiate one can really see how things are changing at ACC. Take note of this article describing the 1956 fashion trend. Keep in mind this was the year the Bohunk opened. (for all you that don't know what the Bohunk is, just ask around.)

Shoes are getting the eye appeal with two tone colors, side slits at the toes, tall slender heels, and the beautiful two-texture, suede and leather casuals.

Stoles are providing popular this fall and winter, as can be seen in Wilson stores. There are white crocheted, metallic thread jersey, and colored woolens.

Seen combining with the skirts and sweaters on our campus is the criss-cross fold of neck scarves in top of sweaters and pinned to the outside of sweater necklines.

Many girls on campus are making the most of small waist with wide belts.

At the informal campus dances college students have looked very neat and well groomed, wearing smart looking casuals, the girls in sweater and skirt ensembles and the men in dark trousers with collegiate shirts.

Clothespins are very much in the news now, starting on collars, pockets, waist bands, and even sock tops.

November fashion notes:

1. Sheathes are not as severe in lines.

2. Sheathes are also featured in evening dresses with the camisole top.

3. Full length evening gowns are in vogue-representing romance.

4. The evening colors are soft, stunning shades.

5. Shirts are yards round or clinging wisps.

6. Gloves are being worn to all tailored affairs. They add that

"Fair Lady Look".

Ever think of this while walking, working, or playing campus... "I watched you for a moment."

"Women are so easy to please that it is a wonder more men don't know how."

This could be extended into better grooming to all our lives.

"When we are wrong, make it easy to change,

When we are right, make it easy to live with."

Anonymous

Tell It

(Continued From Page 1)

who allegedly bought some firearms for defendant to shoot their way out of a courtroom.

Ralph Nader: The champion of consumer rights.

T.O.N. junior Male:

William Rogers: He is secretary of something.

John Mitchell: Attorney General.

Angela Davis: She is the one they are trying to extradict from New York to California for kidnappings.

Ralph Nader: He is the Consumer Crusader.

J.A.C., senior female:

William Rogers: Secretary of State

John Mitchell: Attorney

general

Angela Davis: Only women FBI's most wanted list.

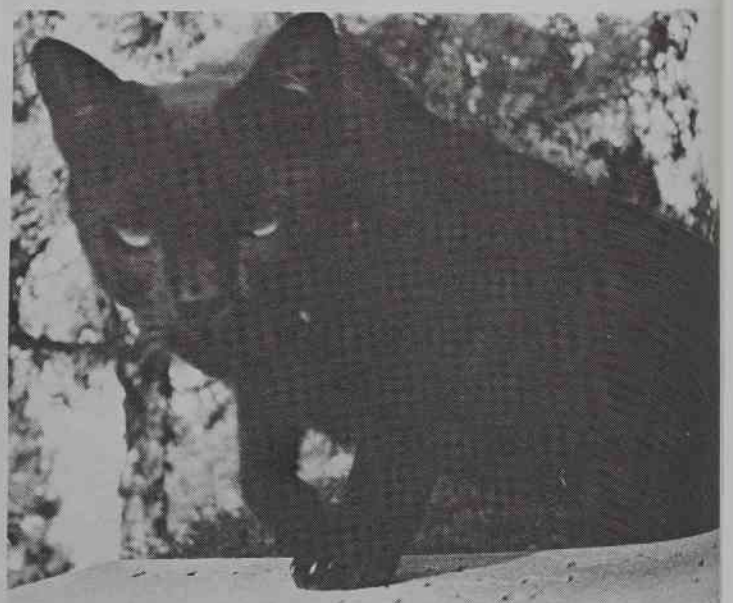

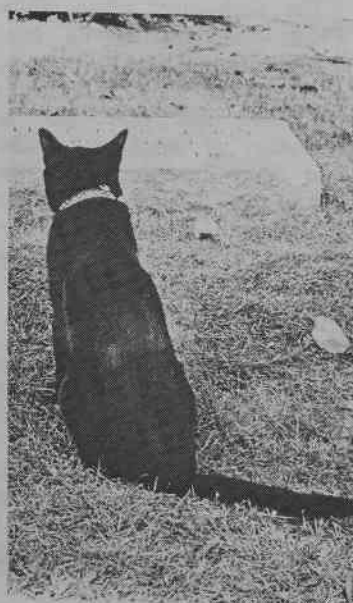

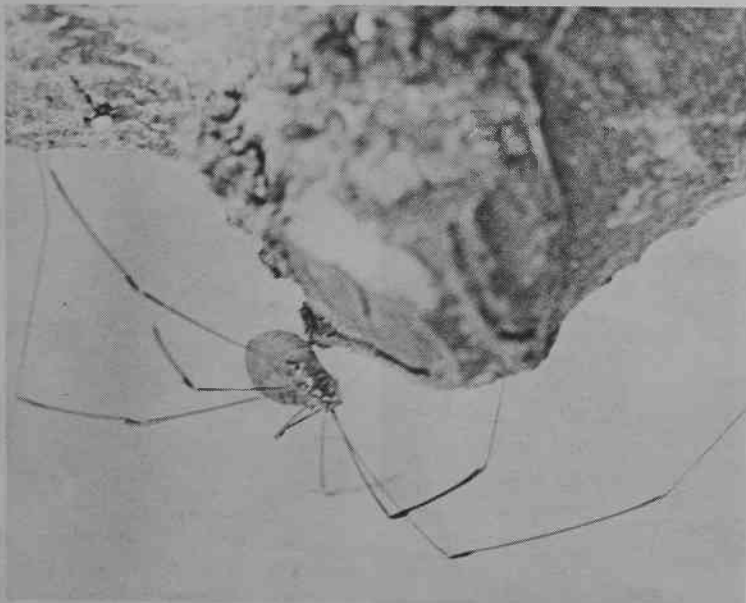

Ralph Nader: Consumer Crusader

M.K.B., senior male:
William Rogers: I don't know
John Mitchell: Just somebody
Angela Davis: A wild female
Ralph Nader: ?

J.E.H., Senior male:
William Rogers: That Harold Rogers nephew.
John Mitchell: Secretary of State.

Angela Davis: She is the groovy radical because her picture is on Newsweek.

Ralph Nader: He holds the world record for top speed in a Corvair.

As the end of October descends upon us the weather has turned chilly and the nights have grown darker. But that won't keep anyone in on Saturday night. You might peek out your door and see a skelton walk right up to your door. The goblins and bats will be flying about and the air will be filled with muffled spouts of glee and excitement. A familiar sight could be an old black cat creeping about or a spider crawling along the walk. But don't be frightened. It's just Halloween. Odd things have been known to happen, haven't they, Miss Parrish? (Photos by Linda Spradlin)