NUMBER SEVENTEEN

Congressional Candidate

Howard Lee Hopes To Excite Student Voters

Chapel Hill Mayor Howard Lee must have all out student support if he is to win the Democratic nomination for the second Congressional District seat from the incumbent L. H. Fountain.

And though no other candidate has been able to excite students enough for a massive voter registration turnout, Lee might very well be the man to get the vote out.

From what Lee told The Collegiate last week, he will mainly be running his campaign on reform of state and national agricultural programs, health care projects and services and generally representing and helping to improve his district.

But there is more to Howard Lee than that, and statements made by him recently better indicate how he will stand on national issues.

On the war:

"As long as human beings continue to die in a war that had no honor in its beginning and even less honor in its continuance, there is a need for change."

On education:

"Every American child should have the right to develop his talents to the fullest — from preschool to college. We must adjust our educational system to meet the future needs of our children, especially those in rural areas.

"Child care centers, technical schools and vocational preparation should receive higher priority than in the past."

On housing:

"The richest nation in the world must provide a decent home for every family. But nearly 25 years after the passage of the National Housing Act, we have a critical housing shortage of 30 million units, nearly one million of them in North Carolina."

And on unemployment:

"Every American has a right to a job. We have too many important jobs to do here in the Second District to have so many Americans unemployed."

In all, Lee is a man who can

Fountain Opposes Education Bills

The Collegiate has recently come into possession of a copy of Congressman L. H. Fountain's congressional voting record. The record itself, compiled during Fountain's twenty years in Congress is interesting particularly in regards to his votes on education bills.

Since 1964 Fountain has voted "No" on seven out of 13 major education bills.

In 1964 Fountain voted no on a bill authorizing a 5 year $1,195,000,000 program for federal grants and loans for construction or improvement of public and private higher education facilities. Also in 1964 Fountain voted no on a bill authorizing forgiveness of up to 50 per cent of student loans borrowed by med students who were practicing in low-income areas.

In 1967 Fountain voted to strike the Teacher Corps program which would have attracted high-calibre teachers to ghetto schools.

In 1970 Fountain voted no on a bill which would have authorized $1.5 billion in aid to public schools undergoing desegregation and to improve schools in "racially impacted areas."

In 1969, Fountain voted no against providing emergency student loan guarantees. In that same year, Fountain also voted no against an amendment which would add $894.5 million to the appropriations for elementary and secondary education, aid to federally impacted areas, higher education and vocational education. This no vote supported President Nixon's urging that the bill be defeated.

In 1970 Fountain voted yes on an amendment which stipulated that no funds in this bill could be used to force schools or school districts already considered "desegregated" under the 1964 Civil Rights Act to bus students, abolish schools or set attendance zones either against the choice of students' parents or as a prerequisite for obtaining federal funds.

Duckworth's Work On Polish T.V.

William Duckworth, a member of the music faculty of Atlantic Christian College, has been notified that his composition "Knight to King's Bishop Four," for dancer and solo percussion, has recently received several European performances by Ensemble MW 2 of Krakow, Poland.

Concerning the first performance which took place in the Modern Art Museum (BWA) of Krakow, Adam Kaczynski director of MW 2 wrote Duckworth, "your composition met with extraordinary applause! It was performed by ballerina Krystyna Ungeheuer-Mietelska and jazz drummer Janusz Stefanski. Choreography was prepared by the famous Polish dancer Witold Gruca." Representatives of television who attended the concert chose Duckworth's piece to be filmed and this film was shown on Polish National Television.

Following the Krakow performance, Ensemble MW 2 took Duckworth's composition on a tour of Scandinavian countries which included performances at the Sonia Henie Museum in Oslo, Norway; Moss, Norway; and Aarhus, Denmark.

Ensemble MW 2 is one of the most respected avant garde chamber music groups in Europe. Founded by Adam Kaczynski in 1962, the Ensemble has to its credit many world premieres of Polish and foreign composers. They have performed throughout Europe and will tour the United States in the spring of this year.

Bloodmobile Gets 305 Pints At ACC

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile recently completed another successful visit to the Atlantic Christian College campus, according to Mrs. Doris Moore, Executive Secretary of the Wilson County Red Cross chapter. Over 305 pints of blood were collected in the three-day visit with over 75 per cent of the blood being donated by students of the college.

"Firebugs" Scheduled

Stage and Script of Atlantic Christian College will present the hilarious satire of middle-class complacency, "The Firebugs," on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 16, 17 and 18.

Swiss playwright Max Frish puts his characters in a ridiculous situation in order for the audience to see their vain attempts to get out of it. Gottfried Biedermann, a self-satisfied and self righteous businessman, finds his home suddenly invaded by two admitted arsonists.

Biedermann, played by Fred Corlett refuses to believe that these men are what they say they are, thinking that if he can befriend them, they will go away. He is reluctantly assisted in his futile efforts by his bewildered wife and a surly maid, played by Diane Bishop Corlett and Gwynn Doughty.

The firebugs themselves, Mike Raper and Hal Hummell, confidently go about their preparations, accepting Biedermann's hospitality at a farewell dinner which they turn into a burlesque, forcing the ultimate indignity on Biedermann when they borrow matches from him in order to burn his house. They consistently hide their efforts behind the truth which, they say, no one ever believes.

Frisch manages also to make fun of intellectuals by incorporating a Ph. D. with revolutionary tendencies as part

In the sorority division, Tri Sigma sorority captured the honors with 22 girls out of 39 donating blood. Delta Zeta sorority placed second with 17 girls out of 57 donating.

The trophies will be awarded to the organizations in separate ceremonies. Mrs. Moore expressed a deep sense of gratitude to all the students who gave of their time and blood during the bloodmobile drive, saying that ACC students have always been cooperative when it comes to assisting the Red Cross.

Demos Endorse Lee

The Young Democrats Club of Atlantic Christian College is publicly announcing its full endorsement of the Honorable Howard Lee, Mayor of Chapel Hill. It was after a close study of Howard Lee's background and performance as mayor of Chapel Hill that the YDC elected to give its full support to Lee's candidacy for the Democratic nomination from the Second Congressional District. With this public announcement of support for Lee, the YDC is making plans to join in full participation in as many facets of Lee's campaign as possible.

Facts about voter registration will soon be made available to the student body through the YDC. Both the time and place of the next YDC meeting will be announced soon.

Politician Expresses

True Feelings

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. — Congressman Nick Galifianakis of Durham, now a Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, inadvertently said what he really felt in a speech to the Moore County Young Democrats Monday night.

He strode to the podium and opened with the words: "It certainly is a pressure to be here."

Some 85 high school and college students attended a Religious Vocations Conference held on the campus of Atlantic Christian College, March 3-4. The program included exploration of various problems which the church is often involved. Representatives from five religious vocations talked with students about opportunities in their fields. Areas covered included journalism, pastoral ministry, missions, chaplaincy and Christian education.
