

"Fleetwood," a small dog who lives off campus, has become a celebrity on campus since his incident with a dog-eating Frisbee plant. Fleetwood was attacked by the plant on Saturday, while grazing in the south forty. Despite the struggles of several veterinarians, it took Fleetwood's own ingenuity to escape. By jerking gruffly at the plant,

Fleetwood managed to pull it out by the roots and cast it against the wall pictured in the background.

Dr. Harold Doster has since launched an all-out campaign to remove the Dreaded Frisbee plants from the campus. Calling the plants a dangerous public nuisance, Doster insisted that the police should strive to arrest all persons caught planting these fiends.

Fleetwood was not available for comment, but is reported in good health. He sustained only minor injuries and incredible embarrassment and has since refused to talk with the media.

Fleetwood may drop out of school.

Dr. Anand P. Jaggi, professor of economics, attended a one-day seminar entitled "Successful Approached to Proposal Writing and Obtaining Grants," on March 29, in Greensboro.

The overall goal of the seminar was to give order and simplicity to the complicated process of acquiring grants and to enable participants to become successful in writing proposals.

All write in votes for the last SGA Elections were tallied; however, all write in candidates who were not eligible were stricken from the ballot. All eligible candidates were phoned — if we could not catch you in, your name was put on the ballot.
