

SOCIAL CHIT-CHAT

Members of the Freshman and Senior Theater Guilds slipped back a few years to the "roaring 20's" and its famous "flapper days," when they were host to the Virginia State Theater Players. It was truly a change of sight and very interesting to see the various types and shapes of legs that the girls had kept in secret as far as our public was concerned. The costumes of the Bennett girls were a great contrast to that of the girls of the Virginia State Players and those of Teachers College, Winston-Salem. However, our attire seemed to have set a mood which was most enhancing for an evening of fun and dancing. The mambo contest was won by Connie Vance and her partner Jarvis from Virginia State. The runner-ups were also from Virginia State. The Charleston contest was won by a Charleston trio from Virginia State. The alma maters of the respective schools were sung with deep sincerity by their "children." All in all the "flapper party" was a big hit!

The Junior Class had a Valentine party which was successful in spite of the prevailing circumstances which were beyond our control. The Junior calypso band played several rhythmic numbers and the members of our class who are "The contemporary creative dancers" finished the program by forming a big red heart. A variety of card games were played and there was constant rhythmic movement with changes in the beat of the feet as regularly as the records were changed. There was fruit punch and cookies to refresh those who needed just a little uplift in order to keep everything gay and fine.

Who said our freshmen were shy and afraid? Well, we might as well wake up because I saw them at Kent Hall's dance. They are slightly shy and innocent looking which only adds to their loveliness. But as far as being afraid that is absolutely an error in our thinking. The dance was very nice and the girls looked like models out of a fairy tale. You can very well see that they have acquired poise and they are charming and if you don't believe it ask the fellows.

The night of March 12th proved another gala affair for the freshmen. The girls of Jones Hall had a dance and it was a complete success with refreshments and garbs of fellows. Hats off to our freshmen sisters.

What we all want and seldom get is time to think.

O'NEIL'S HIT APPEALS TO AUDIENCE

Presenting Eugene O'Neil's great "Mourning Becomes Electra" to an appreciative and attentive audience, the Virginia State Players from Petersburg, Virginia made this production a memorable one in the hearts of all who saw it. This play was given on Saturday February 26, 1955 at 8:00 p.m. in the Bennett Little Theater.

The story in brief is the tale of one man's family and the factors which made a happy home impossible for them. The beautiful wife and mother, Christine, portrayed by Eunice Majette, was drawn by a powerful interest to the youth and daring of Captain A. Brant, depicted by Reuben Jarves. Christine's willingness to use her daughter as a means to the securing of her own ends made one wonder just how great are the ties between parent and child. Her daughter, Lavinna, was beautifully dramatized by Edith Parham. Brigadier-General Ezra Mannon, the father and master in this miserable home was a man driven to seek fortune, fame and adventure as a result of not being able to grasp the love which he so greatly desired. Linwood Person did the stirring portrayal of this man.

Others cast in the production were Hugh Ferguson and Alice Rose Carter as Captain Peter Niles and his sister, Hazel. The general handyman, Seth Beckwith, was portrayed by John Chadwick. Visitors to the estate were: Amos Ames, his wife Louisa and her cousin Minnie depicted by Rudolph McCollum, Lottie Barksdale and Peggy Drewery, respectively.

Members of the Production Staff and Directress Felicia D. Anderson truly did a superb job along with members in making the production the success that it was. The Bennett Little Theater some time previous to this presented their production of "Candida" in Petersburg.

Activation Program For Teaching Announced

Activation of $2,500,000 program of scholarships and fellowships aimed at improvement of teaching in southern colleges and universities was announced recently by University of Texas President Logan Wilson. The program will be administered by the Council of Southern universities, of which Dr. Wilson is president.

The council is composed of Emory University, University of Virginia, Duke University, University of North Carolina, Vanderbilt University, Tulane University, Rice Institute and the University of Texas.

Dean W. W. Pierson has been appointed chairman of the Southern Fellowships Fund Committee of the Council. Dean Pierson is professor of history and political science and dean of the graduate school at the University of North Carolina. Dr. Wilson also announced the appointment of Robert M. Lester of Chapel Hill, N. C., as executive secretary.

As administrator of the fund, the council will make awards for doctoral study to faculty members in Southern colleges, and will later expand the program to include recruiting and training of young people for Southern college teaching. Candidates for fellowships from the $2,500,000 fund will be considered from North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

The program is made possible through a grant to the council from the General Education Board, parent organization of which is the Rockefeller Foundation. The grant is to be made available year by year as needed over a period
