business/advertising lecture. Weldon Washington, of Dow Chemical, and Gregory Phillips of the "Winston-Salem Journal/Sentinel," were the guest speakers. They covered such areas as sales pitch, making the businessman see how advertising is to their advantage, and how the salesman can take the customer's objectives and use them to his advantage.

At noon the sessions broke up for lunch, which was held at the A&T University cafeteria. Meetings resumed at 1:00 p.m. However, the last two hours of the seminar were devoted to a panel discussion about The Role Of the College Newspaper.

Students Must Aid Cafeteria Staff

senior, said, "They should know how many students are coming and not run out of food."

Addressing herself to these issues, Mrs. Jones said, "We prepare for 500 students, sometimes more. We even provide substitutes for students who don't eat pork. We look out for all our students. We have many who are doing student teaching and as we have done in the past those students can always come in the back and eat so they can get to their destination on time."

While problems still remain, some students are enjoying the "good" food in the cafeteria. Cheryl Langford and Sandra Mottly, two freshmen, both said "The food is good and compliments go to the chef." However, Jill Smith, a junior, smilingly commented, "The food is ok but get some grease relief for those porkchops."

The service in the cafeteria would be handled with ease if students would give Mrs. Jones suggestions as to how things could be improved. Mrs. Jones commented, "This is our dining hall. We can make it be just what we want it to be. I am willing to work with students as to what type of menus and any other different things they wish to try."

N.C. to Sponsor 1977 Internships

The intricate workings of the General Assembly will be the focus of a twenty-week internship designed for upperclassmen in social sciences from colleges in North Carolina. Ten students will be selected for internships this year in the program sponsored by the N. C. General Assembly and the Department of Politics at North Carolina State University. Those persons responsible for coordinating the workshop were Benjamin Forbes ,editor-in-chief of the "A&T Register," and the Register's faculty advisor, Mrs. Loreno Marrow.

crime, too many hands were put on the cars, so they couldn't take any fingerprints.

Mrs. Henryhand said that the policeman on duty that night told her that he had gone to check the parking lot twice, and both times everything looked fine.

The campus policeman who was on duty that night was unavailable for comment.

As it stands now, Gilda had to replace her tires and it amounted to $156.00. Wessey and Virginia are still waiting to hear from their insurance companies.

Bennett Belle Trio Attends UNC-G Internship Program

by Faye Howard

Three Bennett College students, Sherry Fuller, Faye Howard, and Nancy Dolfinger, were among the fifteen interns selected under the UNC-G Political Science Internship Program for the summer of 1976.

Sherry, a senior sociology major from Asheville, N. C., interned as a research assistant at the Transportation Institute located on the campus of A&T State University. She assisted in planning and organizing the First National Rural Conference.

Under scheduled deadlines, she was responsible for writing brief reports and summaries related to urban and rural public transportation. By researching and organizing data from primary and secondary sources, she was able to evaluate and to provide suggestions to the researchers who studied actual sites of transportation problems.

Among transportation problems, she noted the difficulties in providing transportation for the elderly and the handicapped and the inadequate transportation provided by the inter-transit city during the peak hours.

Assigned at Congressman Richardson Preyer's Greensboro district office, Faye Howard, a senior political science major, defined her duties and responsibilities as being the same as the objectives of the Greensboro district officeserving the congressman by being that crucial link between the constituents of his district and his Washington office and answering the concerns, requests, problems, and opinions of the constituents or bringing their problems to the immediate attention of the congressman.

5 Courses Added

Five Women's Studies minicourses will be offered during the fall semester at Bennett for one credit hour each.

The objective of Women's Studies mini-courses, according to Dr. Dorinda Trader, director of Women's Studies, is "to make students aware of the contributions of women. The objective is met through guest speakers, seminars and readings. The courses are not test-oriented." Dr. Trader also stated that "Women's Studies are special to Bennett women because opportunities are opening in the field of Women's Studies and Bennett is thought to be the only Black college with Women's Studies."

Any student above the freshman level may register for a mini-course providing it does not cause an overload of semester hours.

valuable in assessing "the direction of one's political career. It served to develop an awareness of the benefits that could accrue from the utilization of the many community resources. It was the opportunity to assess and to cultivate one's personal resources those skills, assets, and characteristics that a person has prior to a professional role."

Nancy, a senior sociology major, was the intern of the YMCA.

Teaching Exam Given

Students that have completed their teacher preparation programs are eligible to take the National Teacher Examination. The educational organization that prepares and administers this test is the Educational Testing Service.

Testing for prospective teachers in the Greensboro area will be given on these dates: November 13, 1976, February 19, 1977, and July 16, 1977. The registration closing dates are listed respectively just as the test dates are. The closing dates for registration are as follows: October 21, 1976, January 27, 1977, and June 23, 1977. The testing time is scheduled for 8:00 a.m. at North Carolina A&T and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Upperclassmen from any fouryear college in the state are eligible and should send inquiries to Dr. Oliver Williams, Department of Politics at NCSU.

The interns will work as staff assistants and researchers for officers and members of the 1977 General Assembly while pursuing a parallel course of study at North Carolina State University.

They will work a minimum of 25 hours a week at the General Assembly and will take two courses on the legislative process and state government. They also will participate in weekly seminars. For their work, they will receive 12 hours of academic credit and $1,000.

The deadline for applying for one of the internships is Oct. 25. Interested students should send an application form, an official transcript and three letters of reference to Williams at NCSU.

The appointments will be made by a committee composed of the speaker of the house, the lieutenant governor and the head of the Department of Politics at NCSU, along with two other professors from other colleges in the state. Belles remind elderly to vote.

Students Involved in Lee Campaign

(Continued from Page 1) Lewis, director of the Voter Education Project in Atlanta, who served as the keynote speaker for the rally. "We fought long and hard for the right to register and vote. Now seven and a half million blacks have not registered," stated Lewis.

Not only did Belles campaign for Lee, but they also helped on voting day by carrying people to the polls and baby-sitting while they went to the polls.

Even though Bennett students worked so hard for a losing cause, many are eager to participate in other worthwhile campaigns. Many of the campaigners were from states other than North Carolina.

"Because he was the first qualified black man to run for such a high office, I wanted to help him. I'm very sorry he lost, but I hope more students will organize and support future qualified candidates," stated Audrey Deleston from Charleston, South Carolina.

Lisa Greene, Greensboro, said, "Dean Bragg's inspiring speech during choir rehearsal made me work. It was an interesting experience." Faye, a native of Farmville, N. C., was not given a prescribed or exact way of dealing with constituent problems; rather, she was given flexibility to use her own initiative and to add her own personality to her work. Faye feels that the summer experience was General information about the examinations, as well a registration form, may be obtained here at Bennett from the counseling center, the education department, or directly from the National Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.
