Scott is honored By Player Hall

On Wednesday, April 22, the residents of Player Hall presented Mrs. Earlene Scott with a plaque for her services during the 1980-81 academic year. Darlene Brooks, vice president of Player Hall, presented the award.

Mrs. Scott has been with Bennett College for three and a half years and serves as the housekeeper in Player Hall. She is originally from Andrews, S. C. and has lived in North Carolina for fifteen years. Mrs. Scott has five children and is the sister-in-law of Mrs. Henryhand, a security guard here at Bennett.

Mrs. Scott has impressed those who know her as being a quiet, hard working individual. "In most custodian positions the employees don't really apply themselves, but Mrs. Scott is efficient and takes the time to talk with us even though she may be busy," says Rosalyn Scott. "Mrs. Scott is a very nice person and always does a good job, especially when compared to the housekeepers in some of the other dorms," says Veta J Covert, another Player Hall resident. Ms. Johnson, the dorm director for Player Hall, shares the same views. "Mrs. Scott is very nice, quiet and cooperative and never complains or refuses to help. Thanks to her we have one of the cleaner dorms on campus," she says.

"The girls are very cooperative in helping me keep the building clean," says Mrs. Scott. "I would like to thank them for giving me this honor," she adds.

Postal Problems

"My letter is not up yet! What are those women in the post office doing with my letter?"

The Bennett College post office window opens at 8:30 a.m. The window stays open for business until the mail arrives. When the mail arrives, the window closes until all first class mail is up. Mary Kirkpatrick, who is the post mistress, said, "I find this very disturbing when there are interruptions at the door or window while we are working to put the mail up."

The mail comes in once a day from the post office. Special deliveries arrive anytime during the day. United Parcel Service packages come in the afternoon, while campus mail is dropped in all day. When these packages arrive in the post office a notice is put in your mailbox. Kirkpatrick said, "We get your mail to you as soon as possible."

The post office at Bennett College serves six hundred students plus faculty and staff. Kirkpatrick said, "Mailboxes should be opened by students. Students should not ask for their mail to be handed to them."

Rent fee for the mailbox is one dollar per year. The rent fee is paid on a yearly basis. The result of not paying the rent fee includes holding the mail, sending the mail back to sender, or taking the mailbox away.

Gerald Nzeribe, Melissa Mitchell and Tomasina Wilson are work study students who work in the post office. Wilson said, "I enjoy working at the post office, even though it gets hectic when there is a lot of mail in. The students are just a little too anxious about getting their mail."

The Bennett College post office buys stamps every day according to how much money there is after operation costs are paid. There is no profit made in the post office by the selling of stamps and postcards. The post office pays the retail price of stamps and postcards.

Cash should not be sent through the mail. Kirkpatrick said, "Money sent through the mail should be in the form of a check or money order."

The women in the post office work hard at putting the mail up efficiently. Belles, be patient with the mail service. If a letter is late, do not immediately blame the women in the post office. A lost letter or package could be anywhere between destinations.

Do not go and give the women in the post office a piece of your mind about your unarrived letter or package. Use that piece of mind to study for a test.

Home Ec fashion show held in gym

Reproductions of Degas, Renoir, Gauguin and Seurat—French Master Artists—and the famed sculpture WINGED VICTORY, provided the background for the annual Home Economics Spring Fashion Show at Bennett College on April 8th in the college gymnasium.

The program presented garments constructed by beginning and advanced students in departmental clothing classes. Original designs were modeled by junior and senior clothing majors. A special feature this year was a group of original designs modeled by graduates of Bennett College during the decade of the 1970's, who were clothing majors during their college days. The program played to a standing room crowd of college and community persons.

The Fashion Show is coordinated by the senior clothing majors and is one of the final requirements during the senior year. The Program is under the direction of Mrs. Louise G. Streat, Chairman of the Department of Home Economics.
