

Ecusta's First Aid Station Is Located In Converter Building

One of Ecusta's primary interests is the health, safety and welfare of its employees. To provide first aid, physical check ups and treatment in cases of sickness or injury, Ecusta has a complete and modern First Aid Station that is conveniently located for all departments. Shown above is a side view of the Station and Carl Watson who has just received treatment for an injury. The Station is well equipped and has four rooms. They are waiting room, dispensary, relaxation room, treatment and examination room.

THEY PREACH "SAFETY FIRST", BUT IF YOU GET INJURED THEY DO A LOT ABOUT THAT, TOO — AT ECUSTA!!

The Safety and First Aid departments at Ecusta have a staff of eight persons composed of a safety director, two doctors, and five nurses.

Shown at the right are pictures of two signs that are posted on the sides of the weighing station immediately inside the gate. These signs tell an important story.

The photo at the bottom, right, shows a view of the waiting room in the First Aid Station. But employees who are hurt do not have to do much waiting! They are given prompt attention.

The view at the bottom left, reading from left to right, shows Mrs. Ira T. Dobbins, Dr. Otis Marshall, Mrs. Sue Bowman and H. E. Newbury.

Do You Read These Signs When Come And Go From Work?

