He received a discharge from the army in January of this year, having served in the South Pacific area for two years. The couple, Ecusta employees, are living in Brevard.

Choose Furniture Wisely

Your living room may need another chair, table or desk, or, perhaps you're furnishing a brand-new home. It's wise to be cautious in purchasing these furnishings, since you want them to last for a number of years and still retain their good appearance and stability. So, first of all, select a reputable store and then look for the following qualities of materials and workmanship in the furniture:

Chairs, desks and upholstered furniture frames should be fitted and joined together, not nailed. Inspect chairs by turning them upside down to see if the bottom is sanded and coated with varnish, to keep out dampness. Sturdy chairs have rungs inserted into the legs.

A good test for drawers of desks and chests is to look for dovetail construction which joins the sides to the front and back. Here again, there should be no nails.

In upholstered furniture, most of the structural features are hidden, so examine what you can see carefully. Springs should be set in even rows, closely spaced and sewed or clipped to the webbing. For firm, resilient action, springs should be tied. Twelve springs to a chair is a good average. In better furniture they should be covered with burlap or heavy cotton which is sewed to the springs.

Hair is the best stuffing—horse-hair the most expensive. Stuffing should be stitched securely into place and covered with a layer of cotton to prevent it from seeping through the upholstery.

Now Is The Time To:

- Picnic.
- Fix roofs.
- Harvest mint.
- Dehydrate fruits.
- Can Bartlett pears.
- Store your winter coal.

Preserve fruits and vegetables. Make spiced grapes and jelly. Get the youngsters ready for school.

NO HURRY

A preacher, after a strong sermon, demanded that all members of the congregation who wanted to go to heaven should raise their right hand. All lifted their hands except one man.

"What!" shouted the preacher, "don't you want to go to heaven?" "Not immediately," he replied.

Attractive Handbook For Employees Is Printed

"YOU AND YOUR JOB" IS TITLE OF NEW BOOKLET

Copies Distributed This Week To All Employees Of Three Companies

This week all employees of Ecusta, Champagne and Endless Belt received from their foremen a copy of a handbook entitled, "YOU AND YOUR JOB". This attractive pocket-book size manual printed in two colors, blue on grey, presents in a distinct and interesting manner the companies' various policies and procedures.

In the center of the book, there is an illustrative history of the plant from the company's first conception to the present day operations. This illustrative material is cleverly worked up in cartoon style and is printed on Ecusta Bible paper.

"YOU AND YOUR JOB" explains company practices in regard to vacations, transfers, holidays, insurance benefits, leaves of absence, promotions, opportunities and responsibilities, and many other interesting subjects. In addition, the handbook contains company rules that must be followed for mutual safety and well-being.

Throughout the manual, as well as on the cover, there is sketched a cartoon character whose body is designed along the lines of a cigarette paper bobbin. This character, a symbol of Ecusta Fine Cigarette Paper, introduces each chapter with a representative pose. You'll be seeing more of "Johnny Bobbin" in future issues of THE ECHO.

For easy reference to any section of "YOU AND YOUR JOB" there is an index on the last pages of the booklet.

On the last page of the booklet, is an insert sheet listing some of the activities which take up the recreation hours. Anyone interested in taking part in some company sponsored activity, is asked to fill in the sheet and hand it to the foreman. All of the mentioned recreational features are available, and each employee is cordially invited to participate.

If, after employees have finished reading the manual, they have any questions or suggestions, they are invited to talk them over with their foremen, superintendent or with the Personnel department.

"YOU AND YOUR JOB" was written, illustrated, and printed by company employees, to give a better understanding of the company and jobs, and to acquaint each one with the various services and facilities available to all employees of Ecusta, Champagne and Endless Belt.

In the future, all new employees of the companies will receive a copy of the manual at the time they report for work.

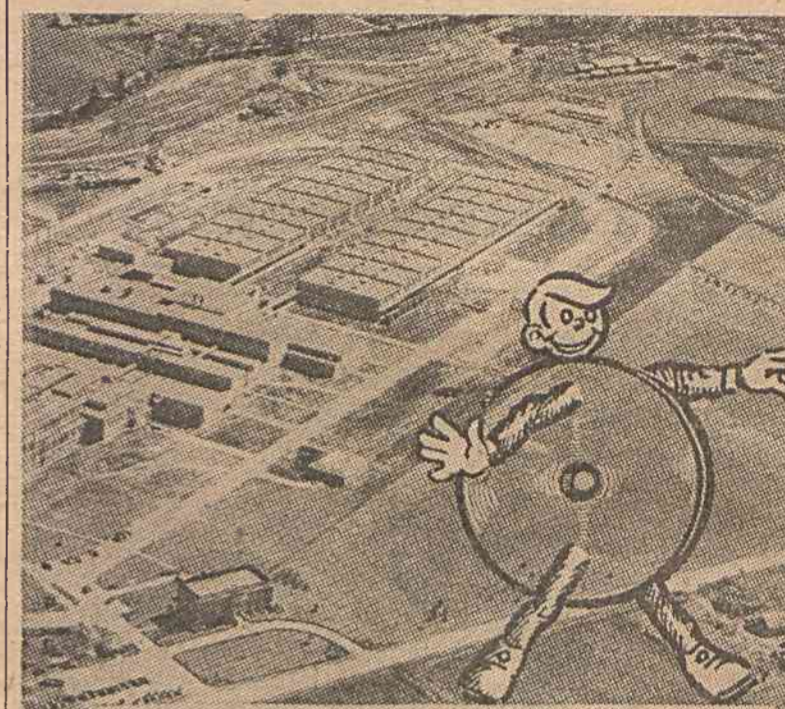

METHOD IN BRAVERY

The boy was the center of a group of admiring men and women. He had crawled out on thin ice to rescue a playmate who had broken through.

"How does it happen you were brave enough to risk your life to save your friend?" asked one of the admirers.

"I had to," was the gasping answer. "He had my skates on."

GOOLSBY CLEANING

By JOHN H. GOOLSBY

Seven years ago this month, we saw the first cigarette paper rolling off No. 4 Machine—experimental run—August 4th, 1939. At that time, in all of our minds was this question: I wonder if we can! Well, today that question is answered. We did. Only through co-operation with one another, and as one great team pulling the load. Today we are turning out every hour many pounds of that snow white paper, thinner than a human hair. Although many changes have been made, and many more will be made, all of this could not have been possible, except through every department co-operating to the highest degree, linking that great chain that pulls Ecusta along the highway of progress. I would like to quote Mr. Harry Straus, our president: "No matter how powerful a combination of money, machines and materials a company may represent, it is a dead and sterile thing, without a team of willing thinking and articulate people to guide it."

A widow had two mites to give. 'Twas all that she possessed. 'Tis said she gave more than the rest, Because she gave her best.

Teacher: Now, children, if George Washington were living, what do you think he would be doing?

Boy in back of class: Drawing old age pension, sir.

When a man's heart is not in his work, his head is on a vacation, and then his hands are of no value to any one.

A sailor from the late war picked up a parrot on one of the many islands and cruised around for about seven months before dropping anchor at Norfolk, Va. After about two days of shore leave, he was broke, and sold his parrot to a pet shop. After a few hours passed, an old maid bought the bird. On arrival at home, she discovered it swore something awful. Back to the pet shop she went with her complaint, and the bird under her arm. "O. K." said the manager, "you can easily stop swearing. The next time you swears, have a bucket of water handy, throw it in his face, and grab the cage and swing is around your head several times."

Back home the old maid went got a bucket of water, and swung by for action. After about five minutes, the bird let loose. Up she jumped, grabbed the cage and swung it around like a brakeman's lantern. Then she threw the bucket of water in his face. The parrot shook himself, ruffled his feathers a little bit, looked down at the maid and said, "Hey, sister, what in the H. were you when that bomb struck?"

I will end with this thought in mind: A dead log can float down stream . . . It requires skill and energy for a man to swim against the current.
