bluff;
 Some carry a load that's too heavy to bear
 While some push on with never a care;
 But the load will seldom heavy be,
 If I like you, and you like me.

He who lives by the side of the road
 And helps to bear his brother's load,
 May seem to travel lone and long,
 While the world goes by with a merry song;
 But the heart grows warm, and sorrows flee
 When I like you, and you like me.

It's the greatest thought in heaven or earth,
 It helps us know our fellows' worth,
 There would be no wars or bitterness,
 No fear, no hate, no grasping,
 —yes,—
 It makes work play, and the careworn free,
 If I like you and you like me.

A colored minister had just finished conducting a funeral for a good woman, and was consoling a bereaved man with these words: "You have lost your wife, but there is someone that loves you, and will watch over you unsal- your sorrow is but a sweet memory."
 "Lordy, lordy, parson, whar is you gasped the colored man, as he quickly dried his tears.

Congratulations to you new officers of our Five Year Service Club. We are behind you one hundred percent, to make this club of its kind in America.
