PSYCHOLOGY PROGRAM SET

The Psychology Club Symposium on "Sex Education in the Public School" will be held on Monday, March 28 at 8:00 P. M. in the Humanities Lecture Hall.

Dr. Jesse L. McDaniel, Director of Admissions, will prepare and give a paper on the issue at the beginning of the symposium.

Dr. Kenneth Nickerson, head of the Psychology Department, and advisor to the Psychology Club will be moderator.

The panel members are Mr. A. Jack Belt, news director for WLOS-TV; Mrs. Michael F. Keleher, an active member of the community, who will present the views of a mother; Judge Robert B. Wilson, Superior Court Judge; a representative from the Out-Patient Clinic of Memorial Mission Hospital; Jim Burnham, president of the student body at Lee Edwards High School; and Miss Beth Cartwright, vice-president of N.F.L. at Lee Edwards.

Dr. Gelolo McHugh, Professor of Psychology at Duke University and Director of Family Life Publications, has consented to be the consultant in the discussion. Dr. McHugh is a well-known expert in this field.

The symposium is not only for students, and the general public is urged to attend. There will be time for questions at the conclusion of the panel discussion.

HIKE STAGED TO WHITEWATER

On February 27 the Asheville-Biltmore Hiking Club staged a trip to the Whitewater Falls area near the Toxaway-Cashiers region of WNC. The hike was participated in by ten club members under the direction of their advisor, Dr. Thurman.

The trek started around 1:30 P.M. Sunday with the drive to the hiking area. The club members were plagued by rain, sleet, and snow for most of their journey, the last twenty miles of which was a backwoods dirt road in ill repair.

Upon reaching the vicinity of Whitewater and covering the last leg on foot, it was discovered that there was no discernible trail from the Falls' headwaters to the bottom. The total height of the Falls is over 800 feet and any descent to the bottom of the gorge into which the tons of water empty, comprises almost 900 feet straight down. Whitewater is the highest falls in the eastern U.S.

However, most of the hikers did descend the first level of Whitewater. Later, four more members climbed down to the intermediate levels of the Falls, and the club's president made the final descent to the bottom pools of the cascade.

All in all the members had a good time and have vowed a return trip with suitable mountain climbing gear when weather permits. All students wishing to join this rather challenging climb are invited by the Hiking Club to partake.

CIRCLE K TO MEET HERE

District Convention March 25-26

The Circle K Club of Asheville-Biltmore is the host club this year for the District Circle K Convention. According to several Circle K members these conventions in the past have been characterized by bad accommodations and poor parties, but the effervescent spirit of the Circle K members has prevailed. This year the accommodations and partying will be the best yet if the amount of work done by the local Circle K is any indication. They urge all Circle K members in the Carolinas District, their delegates and sponsoring Kiwanians to attend this absolute masterpiece of convention engineering.

President Larry Earwood, and his fellow members, have been hard at work making this convention the biggest and best of them all. The ball will start rolling Friday night, March 25 with a school wide dance in the Gold Room of the Battery Park Hotel. The survivors of the dance will attend instructional talks Saturday in the Student Union auditorium. Throughout the day entertainment for the members, delegates, and present Kiwanians will be provided. Folk singing, organ music, and possibly the Lee H. Edwards Square Dance team will be presented.

Saturday evening a banquet is planned for the purpose of fellowship and good unity. Sunday inspirational and educational meetings will be held as well as the convention's conclusion. John Franklin, The Ridgerunner's Circle K correspondent has urged us to say that much praise must be placed on the Asheville-Biltmore Circle K men for their enormous efforts in the planning of this convention.

President Larry Earwood, and Treasurer Jim McNeil formed the entire convention around the unique plan of pre-registration. The dance is being planned by a committee headed by "Chico" Alonzo. Ken Earwood is in charge of refreshments, and the K-ettes will aid in the blind date section for conventioners. The task of gathering door prizes for the guests is ably being handled by David Riddle, Don Bridenstine, Gary Ramsey, Jim Cook, Gary Parrott, and others. Others who also are to be commended for their help are Jim Usery, Stan Huffman, Calvert Hunt, Larry Roberts, Pete Sullivan, Mike Flanagan, and Tom Hughes. Their crucial decisions, probing questions and their demonstration of good interest and forward projection of Circle K have added greatly to the inevitable success of the convention. Another person who must certainly be mentioned is Joe Lanford whose contact with the sponsor, the West Asheville Kiwanis Club, has brought about a great deal of support from the parent group.

Girls who are interested in dating out of town Circle K members are again urged to contact Larry Earwood as soon as possible. This is a dance and a convention that shouldn't be missed by anyone.

For future plans, the Circle K has planned an Easter egg hunt for the children of Eliada Home. Another project was the recent presentation of trophies at the Asheville-Biltmore Homecoming Ball game.

Last but not least is a final reminder about the "dance of a lifetime" on Friday night, March 25 in the Battery Park Hotel's Gold Room. The price is $2.00 per couple and satisfaction is guaranteed by the members of the Asheville-Biltmore Circle K Club.

MAXWELL TAYLOR TO SPEAK AT A-B

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor will be the lead-off speaker for the second annual Foreign Affairs Forum at Asheville-Biltmore College starting April 6.

The former Ambassador to Viet Nam and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will discuss Viet Nam. Gen. Taylor is now serving as Special Consultant to President Johnson on Diplomatic and Military Affairs.

Seven other specialists in foreign affairs also will take part in the forum, which this year takes a long, hard look at the Far East. Sessions will continue through May 23 on the A-B campus.

Other speakers will include:

Former career Foreign Service Officer John Paton Davies, Jr., who will discuss China April 18.

Oliver E. Clubb, Jr., assistant professor of political science at Syracuse University, who will speak on Sino-Soviet relations April 25.

Deputy Under Secretary of State U. Alexis Johnson, who will talk on Japan May 2.

Retired embassy official T. Eliot Weil, who will discuss India and Pakistan May 9.

Former U. S. Ambassador and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Charles F. Baldwin, who will speak on Indonesia and Malaysia May 16.

Dr. Bernard B. Fall, former French underground fighter and now professor of international relations at Howard University, who will give his views on Viet Nam May 19. Dr. Fall has made many trips to Indo-China and Viet Nam to study conditions and combat there.

Former career diplomat William P. Cochran, Jr., who will summarize the forum May 23.

All sessions will begin at 8 p.m. and are open to the public. There is a $10 charge for the entire series or $2 for each session. Students and faculty at Asheville-Biltmore will be admitted without charge. Students from other area colleges and schools will be admitted at half price.

ACS HEARS LECTURE

On February 21 the Asheville-Biltmore Chapter of the student affiliate of the American Chemical Society attended an ACS lecture in Greenville, S. C., at the Greenville Technical Education Center. Nine Asheville-Biltmore students along with their sponsor, Dr. Squibb, attended the lecture while only two students from Erskine College went. Dr. Werner Herz, Professor of Chemistry at Florida State University, lectured on "Abstract Phitochemical Studies of Compositae." Dr. Herz, who is senior editor of the Journal of Organic Chemistry and a consultant for the National Cancer Institute and the Wm. S. Merrell Company, received the Florida Award of the Florida Section of the American Chemical Society in 1965.

The Asheville-Biltmore Chapter has now attended two very interesting lectures and hopes that it can interest more A-B students in joining the Chapter.

Dormitory Bond Sold

Asheville-Biltmore College trustees last week accepted a bid from Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith for the sale of $750,000 in dormitory revenue bonds.

Construction is expected to start early this summer. The college expects to advertise for construction bids in April.

Dr. William E. Highsmith, president, said A-B's first dorms will enable the college to serve more out-of-county students, particularly those from Henderson, Haywood, McDowell, Madison, Yancey, Transylvania, Jackson, Avery, Mitchell and Burke counties.

The dormitories, seven buildings to house 250 students, are scheduled to be ready by August, 1967. Dr. Highsmith said the A-B housing facilities aim to avoid a barracks atmosphere associated with large college dorms, providing instead a small, village-type cluster of buildings.

A central building will contain

STUDIO THEATRE PRESENTS "NO EXIT"

As hells go, the Asheville-Biltmore College Studio Theatre version of Jean-Paul Sartre's "No Exit" has its own devilish charm.

A campus audience gave the production a warm welcome Thursday at a matinee performance in the Student Center Auditorium.

"No Exit" tells the story of a triangle which would be trying enough on earth with some future hope of salvation. The attempts by Cradeau, the cowardly journalist; Inez, who prefers the company of her own sex, and Estelle, the baby killer, to adjust to the situation make for a fast-moving one-act play.

Bob Templeton, as Cradeau, is attracted to Estelle, but too preoccupied with his pre-death troubles to do much about it. Nor does Inez, portrayed by Lani Campbell, help matters. She has her own plans for Estelle, played by Wendy Anderson.

There are no flames, no thumb screws, no torture racks in the Sartre hell, and the principals obviously would prefer these methods after having 60 minutes at each other's throats.

Templeton, a veteran of the A-B stage, does a fine job with the Cradeau role, while Miss Campbell and Miss Anderson, both first timers on stage at A-B, prove quite capable of their roles.

Between the three, they make a perfectly believable dwelling place for the damned out of "No Exit." Lawrence Lewis, as the bellhop in Hades, seems far more at home than the unwilling guests.

Sally Straine and Bob Jones were scenery and lighting technicians. Lewis also served as stage manager.
