UNC-A To Have It's Own Radio Station?

by BILL BURGIN
RIDGERUNNER staff

UNC-A has an opportunity to operate its own radio station.

The essential ingredient, a transmitter, has been donated to the campus by WLOS. It is old, but still is operational and has a capacity of 3000 watts transmission. However, from the possession of a transmitter to the operation of a radio station is a big step, and several large hurdles have to be overcome before it can be accomplished.

The first hurdle is money. It will take approximately $2,500 to establish a station with the output of 1000 watts which is the maximum feasible transmission at the present time.

Roy Holden freshman undeclared, has done extensive investigation into the possibility of UNC-A acquiring the radio station. He has written the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to explore the possibility of getting a Title I grant. This grant would pay up to 50 percent of all construction costs. If that could be obtained, the remainder could probably be raised locally.

The next hurdle is the legal aspects of any radio broadcasting. Ray Holden has checked with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and says that at the present, a commercial station is out of the question. UNC-A will have to be processed as an educational station applicant to obtain a license. This is only one of the many technicalities that must be complied with in order to satisfy FCC regulations.

The third hurdle could be the greatest or the most minor point. This is the problem of manpower to run the station. If the school is to have a station, it has to have capable and willing people to do the work.

If these not insurmountable hurdles can be overcome, UNC-A could be broadcasting in a few months.

10 Named To Who's Who For 1969-1970

Ten University of North Carolina at Asheville seniors have been named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The ten, announced by Dr. Thomas C. Dula, dean of students, were selected by a joint faculty-student committee on the basis of academic and extra-curricular activities at UNC-A.

Those named to the top national campus honor include Edward Wayne Bradburn of Canton, Mrs. Patricia Stevens Cox of Asheville, James Farrell Farnsworth of Greenville, S. C., Mrs. Meridy Diamond Goldstein of Asheville, Ronald Berton Goodwin of Asheville, Miss Patsy Jean Hunter of Asheville, Miss Nora Jane Lauerman of Winston-Salem, Donald H. Meyers Jr. of Asheville, Miss Laurel Kent Richards of Houston, Tex., and Miss Fern Hope Young of Asheville.

Bradburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bradburn of Canton, is a 1962 graduate of Canton High School and is majoring in economics. He has been a cheerleader and vice president of Sigma Lambda Chi Fraternity at UNC-A. He is married to the former Miss Vera Star Culbreth of Asheville, a 1969 graduate of the Asheville campus. ## Sadie Hawkins Day Planned

The last official SGA social activity this term, Sadie Hawkins Day and Dance is Saturday, Oct. 11, announced social commissioner Jim Farnsworth.

Lasting all day at Camp Rockmont, the gates will open at 11 a.m. and close at midnight. The day's activities will be climaxed by the crowning of Daisy Mae and Lil Abner.

Various games from an egg roll to a chug-a-lug contest will begin at 11:30. A dinner of bar-b-que will be served from 6 to 7:30 by Kappa Delta Tau and Alpha Nu Lambda. Then the dance, decorated by K-ettes, starts at 8 p.m. featuring the Viscounts of Spartanburg.

The elections for Daisy Mae and Lil Abner are held during the week of Oct. 4 through Oct. 10. Voting will be by pennies, nickles, quarters, 50 dollar bills, etc. All proceeds will go to the SGA for the cost of the weekend.

Admission is $1.50 per person and tickets may be purchased from members of Alpha Sigma Sigma. Student identification must be presented at the gate.

UNC-A Student Activism?
