WUNF Under Pressure To Organize Under SGA

by David Levitt

WUNF, the campus radio station, is under pressure from Jim Cochran, SGA president, to organize itself under the direct control of the SGA.

After the controversial closing of last year, Cochran has decided to implement changes. A Communication Commission composed of Senators and under the chairmanship tentatively of Frank Dosier, Junior Class President, has been formed to regulate the radio station in order to make it a "service to the students and not under the control of only one individual" Presumably, Cochran referred to the one-man dominations that brought about the conflicts that closed the station at the beginning of last year's fourth term.

The Communications Commissions has been charged with the regulation of all forms of campus communications including the RIDGERUNNER, WUNF, the Summit, Images and any other means of communication on the UNC-A campus.

Its principal function is to see that all SGA laws pertaining to communications are obeyed. In the case of WUNF, Cochran noted the need for the committee to insure that all editorials are more open-minded than those expressed by last year's controllers.

The Commission, which at press time, had scheduled its first meeting for September 20 to begin drawing plans for the regulation of WUNF, also has as one of its functions the

Morrison's Foods Begins Operations

by Sam Pinkerton

Morrison's Food Service Company, with home offices in Mobile, Ala., took over management of the UNC-A cafeteria and snack shop in June of this year. Mr. Elmer Alexander replaces Roger Fry of Saga Foods as the new food service director.

Alexander has said that he has been having problems so far this term, but added that "it is just a matter of getting organized."

Referring to the quality of the food, Alexander said that supplies from the Morrison's warehouses in Atlanta are delivered twice weekly. All entrees and vegetables are cooked "and consumed within a couple of days." There is a fast turnover and "no element for spoilage."

Mr. Alexander also emphasizes the fact that the food served at UNC-A is the same quality as that served in the Morrison's commercial cafeterias. He added that if anyone has a problem they may stop by his office and discuss it with him.

The new company has promised to give the students on the food plan 21 meals per week for the price of Saga's 14 meals per week. Morrison's has also promised to serve a better grade of meat than Saga had. In addition, steak nights will rotate Monday through Thursday with no steak night on the week-ends.

Summit to be Delayed

The 1970-'71 Summit, UNC-A Annual will be delayed about a month according to one estimate and indefinitely according to another estimate by Delmar Printing Co. of Charlotte.

The delay is due to printing foul-ups on the part of Delmar, according to Summit editor, Mark Wilson. Proofs to be examined and then okayed by the staff prior to the printing of the book were never received and printing was begun on the book before copy and lay-out errors could be deleted.

The Summit staff visited Delmar's headquarters September 10 and informed the company of the various errors and as a result, the book will have to be reprinted at the company's cost as per contract.

Three years ago, the Summit signed a three-year contract with Delmar and subsequent staffs have tried to break the contract repeatedly due to the failure of Delmar to meet contract specifications. Wilson announced that a contract for this year has already been signed with American Yearbook Co., Inc.

The Ides of March, Warner Brothers Recording Artists will be on the UNC-A campus for a concert Sunday night, September 26 at 8 p.m. in the UNC-A gym. Tickets are available to UNC-A students at the reception desk in the Administration Building for $2.00. Tickets at the door will cost $4.00.
