

NEW RIDGERUNNER STAFF CHOSEN

The Ridgerunner will continue to serve the UNC-A community with the selection of a new staff. The new staffers, selected by a joint student-faculty committee, are Zollie Stevenson, editor, Laurence Goyer, managing editor, Lynn Hyde and Robert Storrs, co-business managers.

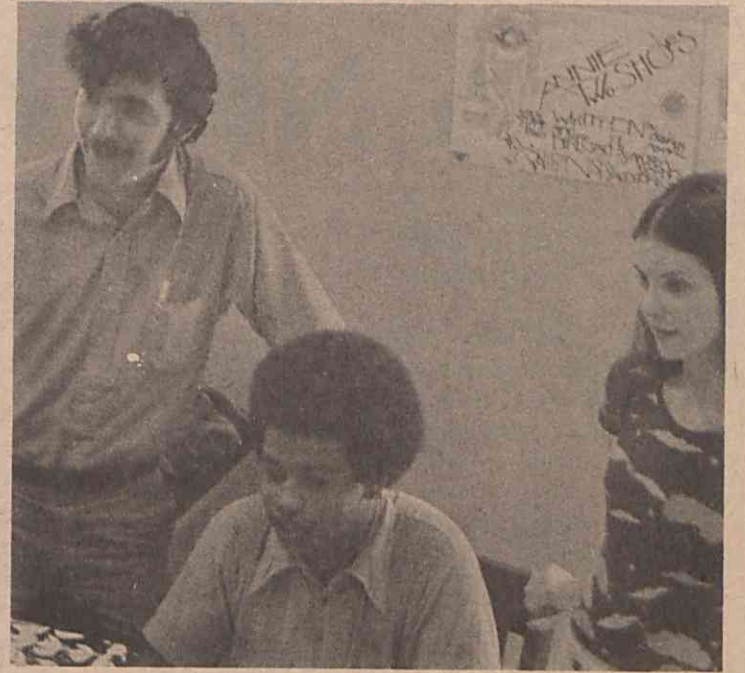

Zollie is a sophomore psychology major from Greensboro, N. C. He was active in high school publications and was organizations editor of the 1972 Summit. Laurence resides in Old Fort and is interested in campus politics. He has formerly served as a staff writer on the 1971-72 Ridgerunner staff. Lynn, a senior drama major, served as assistant business manager to Mile Mergler on last year's Ridgerunner staff and will keep the Ridgerunners books. She is active in Theatre UNC-Asheville and is the proctor of Gardiner Dorm. Robb is a junior drama major and has also been active in Theatre UNC-Asheville. He will operate as a salesman.

The Ridgerunner staff will share photographers with the Summit staff via a cooperative agreement between the two staffs. The photographers will be Chuck Campbell, Charles Patterson, Mark Puckett and Pat Gainey. Pat will also advise the editor concerning layout, content and innovation. Pat has worked with the staffs of the Charlotte Observer and Asheville Citizen as well as being the editor of his junior college newspaper.

Mr. Robert Trullinger will continue to serve as the Ridgerunners faculty advisor. Mr. Trullinger, an assistant professor of history, has served as advisor to Ridgerunner staffs for two Lynn Hyde, Zollie Stevenson and Larry Goyer — Members of Ridgerunner staff.

WYATT SUMMIT EDITOR

Rena Wyatt, a senior psychology and elementary education major from Mt. Holly, N. C., has been elected editor of the 1972 Summit. She was elected editor by the 1972 Summit staff at a dinner meeting held at advisor Tucker Cookes home in May. Rena is presently completing her student teaching assignment at Biltmore Elementary School where she is working with retarded children.

Plans for the '73 Summit were briefly outlined by Rena. The Summit will follow a chronological order with the various sections following the months that we spend in school, August through May. All activities relating to UNC-A will be covered by the staff photographers if advance notice is given to Rena or the photographers, Chuck Campbell, Pat Gainey, Charles Patterson or Mark Puckett. These photographers are talented and eager to co-operate with those people interested in being represented in the Summit. They can be reached through Rena, who lives in Craig Dorm, Pat Gainey who lives in Hoey Dorm or Chuck Campbell at the UNC-A information center.

Other staff members are Wayne Jackson who will serve as sports editor, Mary Alice Arrowood who will continue to perform in her capacity as layout editor, and Chuck King, formerly assistant business manager, who will now serve as business manager. Chuck will be assisted by Stuart Pike who will perform as an ad salesman.

Positions that remain vacant are features editor, organizations editor, classes editor, additional lay-out editors, ad salesmen and photographers. All interested people are encouraged to apply for one of these positions.

Rosenblatt Director of Testing, Counseling and Advising

Dr. Howard Rosenblatt's selection as Director of Testing, Counseling and Advising was made at the close of the spring semester. Campus administrators, well informed students and faculty members have known of his selection for some time, but few people know what this move will mean.

With emphasis on community counseling and guidance in his graduate work, Dr. Rosenblatt will be able to apply his training in the development of a program of guidance services at UNC-A. The guidance services that will be emphasized are testing, counseling, information, placement and follow-up. The testing service will give information about a student's abilities, disabilities and personality. A complete review of all testing procedures will be made to eliminate tests that do not supply beneficial information about the needs of the students. Tests that make students more self-directive will be continued. The counseling service will be increased to include not only advising but also personal and social counseling. Personal counseling is a new aspect of the counseling service at UNC-A. Personal counseling will not be implemented as a disciplinary action against students that are in some form of trouble but will be voluntary in nature for people that wish to be counseled. All personal counseling will be strictly confidential. Co-operation with community counseling services will aid in social or personal problems that are beyond the services available in Dr. Rosenblatt's office but only with the student's consent. Counseling will create closer ties to freshman advisory corps and new professors since adjusting to a new situation is important to their work and the work of new students. Dr. Rosenblatt states that, "Advising may be considered a form of counseling because a good advisor will have a counseling point of view." Counseling, therefore, will be the most basic service. The information service will make known various social services available to the community and will handle all inquiries from directions to the dance studio to movies that will be shown on the week-ends. Information about graduate studies will be stored in a section of the library, but this plan is a long range goal. A placement service will provide a complete folder about college work, recommendations, and positions held so that a permanent record of achievements will be available when needed by a former student in search of jobs and higher positions. The placement service is also a future goal of the department. Finally, a follow-up service will be implemented which will work with Mr. Eddie Harris, director of Alumni Relations, to improve the schools reputation within the community as well as to develop stronger alumni support. The quality of the student graduates and their successes will be highlighted by the follow-up service, therefore, contributing to the schools good image.

Dr. Rosenblatt would not have accepted this position if he could not administer the testing, counseling and advising program in the manner that he desired to. His reason for tackling the job is to show the students that UNC-A cares about their future and to demonstrate his philosophy that "education deals with the whole student." Chancellor Highsmith has given Dr. Rosenblatt the greenlight to proceed, so Dr. Rosenblatt and his colleague, Mr. Carl Wilsman have begun to implement a much needed guidance facility at UNC-A.

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Student Government elections were held, after much delay, in May, but there are many students that do not know of the election results.

The new Student Government President is Ray Gasperson of Asheville, who ran on a platform of change and improved communications between the students and UNC-A. Ray lives in Aycock Dorm thereby fulfilling his campaign promise of becoming a dorm student so that he can be close to his work. Gasperson is a senior political science major. Frank Dosier was elected vice-president of the SGA. Frank has held other positions in the student government. He is also a political science major presently living in Asheville. Mary Kruszewski, a literature major from Erie, Pennsylvania, was elected secretary of the SGA.

The student senate is composed of the class officers and inter-

Printing Seminar at UNC-A

U.N.C.-A. is very fortunate in being able to offer to the student body and interested persons a "Press and Printing Seminar" on September 9th in the Carmichael Humanities building. That may not sound like a very exciting name, but the seminar looks to be an enjoyable and thought-provoking afternoon. It is a must for anyone concerned with journalism, or simply interested in the publishing of printed matter. Organized by Pete Gilpin in collaboration with Groves Printing Company, six full hours of informative discussion have been planned, with topics ranging from photography to news-gathering and writing to artwork and even the selection of paper. People who really know their business, including several staff members of the Asheville Citizen-Times and Groves, will be on hand to discuss their work and to answer questions. This event is FREE. It is being provided to motivate some intellectual stimulus about a field that the public comes in contact with every day, but knows precious little about. Registration begins at 9:30 A.M., so make an effort to come and hear what these people have to say. It might even be fun.
