Trustee and Foundation Member Named On Secret List of Nixon Contributors

Students Plan To Resign From Committees

Students serving on institutional committees are considering resigning unless they receive full voting rights, according to Ken Wright, president of SGA.

Wright was quick to note that this was a last resort, and that student committee members will first go to their respective committees and ask for full voting rights.

"If full voting rights are not granted we will then decide on a course of action," Wright said. "But, resignation is a possibility."

Presently students have full voting rights on seven institutional committees. There are no students on the degree programs committee, and students may vote only on matters of policy in three other committees. Those committees are: the honors committee, admissions committee and the scholarships and student aid committee.

Institutional committees are usually composed of two or more students and five or six faculty members. The following is a listing of the committees which have student membership and their members:

--Admissions Committee- Tony Gole and Zollie Stevenson

--Athletics Committee- Bob Pyler and Audrey Byrd

--Educational Innovation and Better

Exchange of Gifts

Like Riggs and King, Gilpin and Frye also met at center court and exchanged gifts before their match. Gilpin presented Mrs. Frye with a box of candy, while she returned the gesture by giving him an athletic supporter. (Staff Photo by Sam Ferguson)

Chauvinistic PR Man

Defeats Women's Libber

Last Friday, on a beautiful sunny afternoon, UNC-A's answer to Bobby Riggs, Pete Gilpin, representing the forces of male chauvinism, engaged student and women's libber, Jane Frye, in a tennis match.

Unlike, the recent match in the Houston Astrodome, where Mrs. Billy Jean King handily defeated Bobby Riggs, the forces of male chauvinism prevailed.

The 45-year-old Gilpin, who is director of public information for UNC-A, made quick work of the 21-year-old Mrs. Frye, 6-1 and 6-0.

After the match a tired but happy Gilpin said "If it had gone much longer I don't think I would have lasted."

Naturally Mrs. Frye was disappointed, but Gilpin has promised to grant her a return match--after he's had two or three weeks to recuperate.

When informed of her husband's stunning victory by telephone, Mrs. Mary Gilpin, dormitory coordinator, replied, "You're kidding."

In the days that have transpired since Gilpin's victory, Mrs. Gilpin has noticed her husband moving in a somewhat peculiar manner and some what slower than usual.

When warned about the possibility of having every female on campus wanting a tennis match with him, Gilpin said he wasn't going to play any females except those his own age.

"And besides, he replied, how many women are you going to find that will admit to being in their forties."

Over $60m Raised During 1972 Campaign

The names of a member of the UNC-A Board of Trustees and a member of the UNC-A Foundation, were on a secret list of contributors to President Nixon's re-election campaign released last Friday.

Claude S. Ramsey Jr., of 9 Fairway Place, Asheville, who serves as chairman of the UNC-A Foundation's fund drive, gave $3,000 to the Nixon campaign.

Ramsey, former head of American Enka, is now president of Akzona and chairman of the board of directors.

The other UNC-A contributor was Maurice H. Winger Jr. of 15 East Forest Road, Asheville.

Winger is a member of the UNC-A Board of Trustees, president of American Enka and member of the Akzona executive committee.

Nationwide, the committee to re-elect the president raised more than $60,000,000 $56,000,000 of which they spent in the course of the campaign.
