Talks Continue With Western

Continued negotiations between UNC-A and Western Carolina University at Cullowhee on areas of responsibility for each institution were approved unofficially Wednesday by the UNC-A board of trustees.

Lack of a quorum at the board meeting prevented official action on the request by Chancellor William E. Highsmith.

Highsmith, in a prepared statement, said he has conferred several times with WCU acting Chancellor Hugh McEniry, and that he McEniry met last week with members of the two boards of trustees, a representative from Chapel Hill and members of the UNC Board of Governors.

"Throughout our discussions, we have been concerned about using resources that we already have so as to provide for a system of higher education which will be at the most reasonable cost to the taxpayers and to the students," Highsmith said in his statement.

"We have also been concerned about protecting and preserving the identity and integrity of each institution," he said.

"We don't want to get into situations where people get confused about what each institution is supposed to be doing.

"This action should be appreciated and applauded by all. Inasmuch as the board of trustees of WCU has taken such a positive step, I ask that the board of trustees of UNC-A do the same," Highsmith said.

Masters Program Planned Here

A program leading to the Master's in Public Health degree will begin here in February, 1974.

Offered by the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Public Health and its Department of Health Administration, the program was organized in collaboration with the Area Health Education Center.

Announcement of the program was made by Miss Lydia Holley, director of the Off-Campus Degree Program for the School of Public Health, Dr. Henry S. M. Uhl, director of AHEC, and Dr. William E. Highsmith, chancellor.

The program will be the second off-campus master's program established by the School of Public Health and, like the initial program at Raleigh, will focus of health administration.

Miss Holley said the program is designed to improve health and human services administration by upgrading the competence and performance of managers, meet career development needs of professionals working in health and human services agencies and benefit participating agencies through inter- and intra-agency interaction of administration personnel.

"This graduate program prepares student dents to advance their careers in health administration with emphasis on planning, organizing and managing health and human services at local, state and federal levels," Miss Holley said.

"Working with a faculty adviser, the student develops a course of study to meet degree requirements and his of her own learning needs in areas such as health

Newsweek Polls Campus Editors

(CPS)-- According to a poll conducted by Newsweek Magazine and the Associated Collegiate Press, 75 per cent of college newspaper editors said that they have confidence in the principles of the American political system and 70 per cent said that even though the American system may not be ideal, it is the best available in the world today.

However, a majority said they do not believe the American system of government is democratic.

The survey, conducted during September and October, was mailed to 575 college editors.

More than half of the editors strongly agreed that inflation is the biggest problem the U.S. economy faces today and nearly 75 per cent said they do not believe President Nixon will take steps to improve the economy this year.

In the cultural area, one of the most significant findings of the poll was that three-fourths said the government is spending too little money in support of the arts.

Sex Traded For Grades

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (CPS-ZNS)--A 21-year old female student reported to a California state government investigating committee that some professors give out good grades to coeds in return for sex.

Miss Christine Sullivan, a communications major at Sacramento State University, told the Joint Committee on Legal Equality that the policy is known as "an 'A' for a lay."

Miss Sullivan testified that, on the basis of her discussions with other students, she believes the practice is very widespread on college campuses throughout the state.
