His voice is not the best, but it is energetic and that makes up for what he lacks in quality. Steve Goodman is a superior musician and he plays the guitar on all but one of the songs on this album.

"Say It In Private" is a serious album. Every song has something to say that cannot be called funny. The lyrics are direct and to the point. Side one starts with "I'm Attracted to You", a sweet love song. It goes well with the next song, "You're the Girl I Love." "Video Tape" describes how life would be so much easier if our lives were on video tape. The line, "You could replay all the good parts and cut out what you don't like" sums up the whole song. "There's a Girl in the Heart of Maryland" is another love ballad, "Two Lovers" by Smokey Robinson is nicely arranged.

Side two really brings out Steve Goodman's songwriting ability. "Daley's Gone" is a poignant song in memory of Chicago's late Mayor Daley. "My Old Man" is the best song on the album. The lyrics are sensitive and true to reality, a boy grieves for his father late but with feelings that only time could make clear. "The Twentieth Century is Almost Over" is about the times we live in and it makes you wonder if we'll survive to the next century.

If you want to join a small group of knowledgeable people, buy this album, listen to it. You'll become a Steve Goodman fan by the end of side two. "Say It In Private" is a folk-sy album that should find its way into most quality record collections.

Lynyrd Skynyrd

It's a pity to say, but Lynyrd Skynyrd's last album "Street Survivors" is really pretty much the same as all their others. Throughout the lifespan of the group, they progressed very little. Instead, they gave their fans what they wanted to hear; namely good old get-down boogie music. "Street Survivors" keeps this theme going. The album is really more of an expansion of their previous albums than a progression.

If you have a taste for a social protest song like "Saturday Night Special", you'll like their new "That Small". If you liked their softer ballad type songs, you'll probably like "One More Time". And if you like "What's Your Name", "Honky Tonk Nighttime Man" and "I Never Dreamed". The final cut on the album is a heavy blues number.

All things taken, if you ran out and bought all of Lynyrd Skynyrd's previous albums, go buy "Street Survivors", but if you never like Lynyrd Skynyrd, you probably won't like this either.

bar review

THE GASLIGHT

Every so often some people get tired of the same old places in town to have a few drinks or beers. What they want is some new place to go to on a bar-hopping night. Well, maybe where you need to go is the Gas Lite Lounge. The name is new, but the place is old. The Gas Lite was originally the Trolley Car Lounge for years to some of us older students. The location is still the same which is under the Civic Center Motel.

The Gas Lite offers basically a regular place to go drink beers stead of one or two regular places.

Now as for amusement, there is pool, fooseball, and color cable TV. Also, they probably have the last Happy Hour in town. So when you are finished at either the Dock, Caesar's, Liberty Corner or the Pub, just saunter on down to

at a reasonable price. They also have their ABC License for set-ups but this is mainly to keep their out-of-town guests happy who might be staying at the motel. Their main clientele, though, are regular working people who like several places to go to drink in the Gas Lite from 7-8 p.m. and grab your last few half priced beers. And on Thursdays and Fridays, they have live music being performed by the blue-grass band that performs at the Dock regularly Monday through Wednesday.

Is your beer drinking in a rut due to the places you frequent? Do you need a new place for every now and then to go and quench your thirst? Maybe the Gas Lite Lounge is the change you need. At least try it once. Who knows, you may like the place.
