Why are we being subjected to such rudeness and discourtesy as illustrated by these examples? If we are interrupting the late movie or Johnny Carson for you, or your drooling while hovering over a Hustler, then I extend my sincerest apologies. On the other hand, I pay my room and board fee and should be treated as a paying customer, not as a teen-ager who has come home after curfew and her parents decide to ground her.

The establishment of visitation hours was to keep unwanted people out of the dorm, not residents, unless I have been misled the past two years. Also, if the doors are locked as a way of getting me in the dorm by a certain hour, then this should be explained as such. Also, the female residents have received no notice that we could not be let into the dorms after they were locked, if this is, indeed, a newly-instituted rule.

I would now like to establish event Number V. In celebration of the Holiday Season, I took approximately ten Christmas cards to Vance Hall to be placed in main boxes. I was hurriedly and curtly told to come back when a proctor was on duty at night; the cards were "just extra work" for the personnel in the office at 11:30 in the morning. Please enlighten me, dearest editor: how long does it take to put ten cards, with addresses on them, in ten mailboxes? So ends Event Number V.

I simply do not understand why people can scream between dorms at 3 in the morning with no reprimand, but I cannot get into my dorm without a rude word, or childish silence. If anyone can answer these questions, please be so kind as to print them.

Sincerely yours,

Stiff Fingers

P.S. I realize that by writing this letter, all of my transcripts will be lost, my refrigerator repossessed, my business records misplaced, and my room deposit check dropped between the wall and a sofa. Because I know it has happened to editorialists in the past, I am prepared for a nervous breakdown and to seek political asylum!

Changes in Registration Discussed

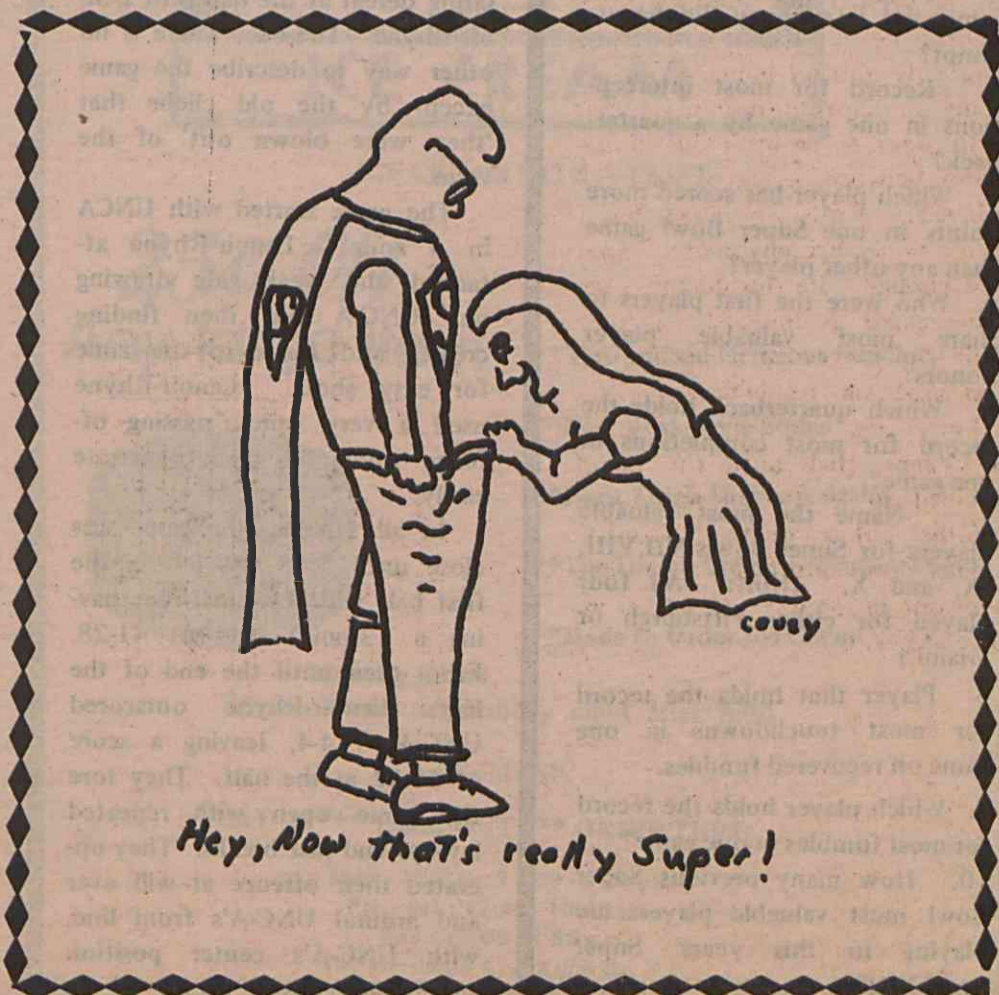

Registration was held January 8 in the Justice Gym. The day student may have had to stand in line for an hour and a half or longer. A night student registration took on the average of two and a half hours.

Drastic measures to simplify night registration have been discussed by concerned academic personnel. One alternative discussed was mail in registration for night students. Another revision discussed was to have departments distribute class cards.

The big problem for day students was getting through the business office lines. Approximately 150 day students pre-paid. The idea of lengthening prepayment time has been discussed. Pre-registration and prepayment are highly recommended to cut down on inconveniences to the day student.

The enrollment for this term is 1,904. This is a record enrollment for UNC-A. The increase was mainly in evening students of which there are 490.
