raison d'être

The Rag and Bone Shop is in a state of androgeny at this point. We're no longer exclusively an arts and literary publication. With the resignation of Ridge-runner editor Maureen Bigelow, who with the sanction of the Publications Board appointed me editor, the status of The Rag and Bone Shop has become difficult to define. Since we at The Rag and Bone Shop are rather enamored of our little publication, we have decided to expand the basic format published in February to include more news.

The last issue of The Rag and Bone Shop was marked by an extremely experimental quality. Those of us involved in the publication were so green that we approached everything from typewriters to lay-out paper as though we might contract leprosy.

Well, we didn't catch anything, so here we are again. We've had a good time and hope that some of that has been communicated. It seems, from feedback concerning the last issue, that there is interest on campus for a publication of this sort. Please contact us with submissions and suggestions. We're open after 3:30 every day. The deadline for the next issue is April 27.

I would like to thank our small but stalwart staff, the UNC-A Literature Department, Maureen Bigelow and the Publications Board for their support and generosity. We had been given short notice for the go-ahead for this issue, and without the help of those mentioned it would have been impossible to publish.
