

NOTICE:

Due to Fall Break on Oct. 21-22, The Blue Banner will not publish next week. The next issue will be Oct. 31.

Apartheid protested

Page 6

Sting hits Carolina

Page 9

THE BLUE BANNER

Serving the students of the University of North Carolina Asheville since 1982

Vol. VII, Number 7

Thursday, Oct. 17, 1985

Photo by Jonna McGrath

WHAT IT TAKES TO GET IN THE M5C: Mike Nielson, Bryan Benak, Al Winston, Mike Eichner, and Allen Dawson shared the beauty of their stylish boxer shorts with the lunchtime crowd last Thursday afternoon. The seven encountered a little trouble later in the week on a 'fun run' from Denny's restaurant to UNCA.

Fun run pace faster than expected

By David Proffitt

One phase of recent initiation proceedings of the MUD 500 Club resulted in a minor confrontation between seven initiates and residents of a local neighborhood last Sunday night.

According to a source who spoke on the condition that his identity not be revealed, the initiates had to run from Denny's Restaurant on Patton Avenue back to UNCA in their boxer shorts.

Several M5C members expressed reluctance to discuss the incident with the Blue Banner, and some even said they were unaware of it.

"Every year when the club has its initiation, the initiates have to do different things, and one of them this year was a fun run," he said.

"The guys were running back to UNCA when they took a wrong turn and went through a neighborhood that isn't very safe. Some of the residents saw them and came out and accosted them," he said.

"We had to run a little bit faster than we expected," said Keith Hege, one of the seven initiates.

"No one got beat up or was seriously injured," said Hege.

Elderly neighbors who saw the shorts-clad seven called the police, but the police did not consider the matter a serious one, according to the source.

"The police came back to the campus and treated the whole thing relatively lightly," he said.

Dr. Joe Sulock, advisor to the M5C, said that "people who are in unusual places are going to have unusual things happen to them.

"It's the type of thing that in 20 years, they'll look back and laugh and say, 'Hey, we were a crazy bunch of guys,'" said Sulock.

Sulock said he would not try to enforce any type of new rules on the M5C because of the incident.

Overcrowding in economics classes means musical chairs

By Scott Luckadoo

Students attending class in room 221 of the Zageir building have been playing musical chairs lately.

Unfortunately, the losers sometimes wind up on the floor.

Since the beginning of this semester, economics classes held in the 221 classroom have contained as many as 41 students, according to Dr. Shirley Browning, professor of economics.

The room has only 35 desks which may leave several students sitting in stuffed chairs or on the floor, Browning said.

"We've requested more chairs and haven't gotten them. The big mystery to me is where are the chairs?," Browning noted early last week.

Gary Klonicki, instructor of economics who also holds classes in 221, called the problem "ridiculous.

"Most of the Principles (of economics) classes are taught in 221. These classes are averaging about 38 or 39 students," Klonicki said.

"I've had to go out and bring in chairs from other classrooms. People are having to steal chairs from classes that have notes on them reading 'Do not steal chairs'," Klonicki added.

"It's crazy," Ivan Cohen said of the situation. Cohen, also an economics instructor, holds a managerial finance class in 221 as well as another economics class.

"There are 38 people in my managerial finance class that closes at 25. In the beginning, there were always two or three people on the floor," Cohen said.

continued on pg. 7