FASHION FAIR

UNC-A's director of institutional research, Dr. Nathaniel Felder, is general chairman for the appearance in Asheville of the 22nd annual Ebony Fashion Fair on Oct. 30.

The show will begin at 8 p.m. in the Thomas Wolfe Auditorium at the Asheville Civic Center.

Proceeds will be used toward the operating budget of the Market Street branch of the Asheville YMCA.

The Fashion Fair is touring 165 cities this year under the auspices of Ebony magazine. It features a large showing of American and European designs in women's and men's clothes and accessories.

Tickets are $12 for adults and $6.50 for students. They may be bought at the Civic Center box office, Central YMCA and the UNC-A student center.

CHEROKEE PLEA

UNC-A special student Abby Bradley of Asheville, a Cherokee Indian, is among members of her tribe seeking to block construction of the Tellico Dam in Tennessee because the resulting lake will cover ancient Cherokee ceremonial grounds.

She writes, "As Indians of the Cherokee tribe, we hold our religious beliefs as sacred as any possessed by the non-Indian society.

"Our ancestors chose certain outdoor places where the life-giving spirits of the earth were strongest and easiest to reach.

"We have had many of our sacred traditional grounds destroyed or fenced off, leaving us without access to those places that are sacred to us.

American Indians have many needs, but without our spiritual heritage and freedom almost everything is lost."

The concerned organization is the "Cherokee Defense Fund, Box 455, Cherokee, N.C., 28719. More information may be obtained by calling 253-6061 in Asheville.

JERRY NEEDS HELP

Want to travel with the Bulldogs? Cheer on the team at home and away? Keep statistics? Help tape ankles? Men's basketball coach Jerry Green is looking for you. The job that needs filling is called "manager-trainer," said Green. It generally means "helping any way you can" to put the Bulldogs on the winning side. Whoever likes the sound of it can find out more by calling Green at 222 or seeing him in person at the gym.
