THE CLARION

Delphian Society Holds Initiation

The New; Look! By Harry Woosley

What is this thing called "the new look?" Is it man or beast, living or dead? Is it what the scientist sees in the nucleus of the atom? Was it seen on the Bikini Atoll? Is it in your blood stream, a dangerous virus ready to end life on earth? Is it an aquarium containing a sea serpent? Is it a mirror where one sees, in pain, his own face? Is it a hand-to-beat the royal flush in poker? Could it be a new fashion for women? Yes!

The "new look" is the new (it is new because only our great, great grandmothers wore it) fashion designed by some lunatic designer who wanted to add a new expense as if the cost of living is not high enough—. In a way, though, it is a saver because if it gets longer the wearer will not have to wear shoes and socks. The "new look" is a killer in disguise, lurking in the dark corners of the universe. It kills the joy of windy days, and think of the now silent millionaires who sat by the club windows in former days watching the fair ones pass by. All of the long discussion is now at an end. They sit as gentlemen should; what a horrible thought!

What dangers do the "new look" hold? Any woman could trip and cause the most brutal of deaths; sitting on posterior ends in the light of society. Wearers are liable to be shot, mistaken for paratroopers. It adds much discomfort to the escort, not knowing whether he is to dress formal or informal. It is an asset to the man who hides behind a skirt; also the skirt hides much. (Intended for my rather; O, I say, this is awkward, plump friends.) It will throw many out of jobs, especially the ones who mash the air buttons at the fun house. With such an extravagance of material, there is the danger of propelling the wearer to Mars.

The "new look" is made by buying an army surplus parachute and cutting the shroud lines at the bottom of the chute. Then extend the body, to the waist, through the opening at the top of the chute. A new twist may be given by adding a blue waist band, but you will have to get patent rights, as I have patented that idea. Well, this is it; Geronimo!

New members of the Delphian Literary Society are pictured above as they went through the antics necessary to becoming a member of the organization. The activities lasted the entire day and ended with all members of the club attending the Brevard-High Point game as a group.

front of the Lees-McRae stands. In this position they played "American Patrol." Similarly, the members of the band formed a "B" before the Brevard spectators and played "Hail to the Chief."

The 36 members composing the band, under the direction of Mr. Artley, have great plans for the Homecoming game. During the half they expect to play a special arrangement of "Dixie." The manner in which they march across the field will be different from the usual routine. When the "G. W." is formed before the Gardner-Webb stands, the strains of "For Ile's a Jolly Good Fellow" will fill the night air. The performance before the Brevard on-lookers will consist of the band's original rendition of "I've Been Working on the Railroad," featuring the trombone section. While parading off the field, they will present the usual "Hand Me Down My Walking Cane."

The drum major and majorettes plan to demonstrate their abilities more than ever before by working out some new prancing steps and routines.

Those students who are members of the band are as follows: Mr. Malvin N. Artley, director; drum major, Jim Wofford; flag bearer, John McIntyre; majoret-

Christian Workers Sponsor Campaign

The Christian Workers club has undertaken a project to buy new hymnals for the college auditorium by collecting money from students and an unnamed person who will help bear the expense of the books. Jim Underwood, president of the club, expressed the opinion that members of the student body would perhaps like to leave something for the school when they graduate.

The price of these new books is $1.35 each, and for every dollar the Christian Workers club collects, this benefactor will add 35 cents.

"Booths will be placed in the lobby of Dunham Hall to handle collections from the students and it is also hoped that this project will receive support from the faculty as well," Earl Gibson, chairman for the project announced.
