

EDWIN L. JONES, prominent building contractor and a leader among Methodists in the South, was the principal speaker at the annual Brevard chamber of commerce banquet Thursday night in the Brevard college cafeteria.

Sunday Sings Are Brevard Tradition

About fifty boys, girls and members of the faculty assembled in the parlor of West hall at 9 p. m. on February 11, for what is hoped will become a traditional event on the Brevard college campus — a Sunday night sing.

Reid Gilbert, Brevard college sophomore, who was in charge of the program, announced that plans for future programs include special solos, duets, and quartets. He urged anyone wishing to take part in these special features to make their wishes known.

Students Organize Reader's Club; Kennedy, Advisor; Gilbert, Head

The Readers' club of Brevard college held its first formal meeting on the afternoon of February 20 and elected officers to serve through the current academic year. Reid Gilbert was elected president; Tom Roberts, vice-president, and Ellen Faulkner, secretary-treasurer.

The central purpose of this group, as explained by Tom Roberts, ex officio program chairman, is to afford its members training and practice in the art of reading aloud.

Active in initiating the organization were ministerial students and others whose professions will re-group will work with selected quire skill in public reading. The prose, drama, and poetry—secular and sacred. Later in the year the Readers hope to accept engagements for platform reading; and they may offer a recital some time in the spring.

helps one helps the other, and also what hurts one hurts the other."

Listing the general advantages of the small church-related college, the speaker stressed what Brevard college can do for the students of the Brevard region. He said:

"When a student now leaves Brevard college to enter another college or university for advanced academic work, that student goes well prepared, well grounded and with a certificate that is gladly, even eagerly, accepted. President Ehlhardt and his fine faculty are making Brevard a real college."

Banquet Well Attended

General preparation for this assembly of regional businessmen, their wives, Brevard college faculty, and friends of the college was carried out under the supervision of John Ford, chairman of the entertainment and conventions committee of the local chamber.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gaither supervised the staff of the college cafeteria in serving the more than 150 people who attended. The room was decorated in a manner appropriate to George Washington's birthday.

Eight Are Added To Language Fraternity

Mary Alice Hollifield, president of Sigma Pi Alpha, honorary fraternity at Brevard college, has announced that the organization will initiate eight new members in a formal ceremony in the near future.

Students maintaining a "B" average and who are making at least a "B" on the foreign language course they are taking have been invited to become members of the organization.

The new members for this year are: Lawson Bingham, Carol Carter, Mary Louise Dean, Russel Gentry, Natalie Jones, Alice Leggett, Tom Neal, and Bernie Welch.

The initiates will be honored at a banquet in the cafeteria after the service.

Take a Trip Over To Visit "Fabia"

Students who never get sick enough to visit the infirmary should make at least one trip—to see FABIOLA.

This painting, a reproduction of the Henner original, hangs above the desk of Miss Vera Ault, college nurse.

The subject, Fabiola, was a Roman woman who about 390 A. D. set up the first Christian free public hospital. She financed it herself and worked in it as a nurse. Fabiola gathered the poverty-stricken sick from the streets and nursed them back to health.

The French artist, Henner, was impressed by the story of this Roman woman and through his painting has immortalized her services to suffering humanity. The original now hangs in the Louvre Museum in Paris.

Warren Lee Terry to President "Camille" Ehlhardt: "It isn't the coughin' that takes a man off. It's the coffin more often."
