

INNER-VIEWS

This month we are featuring four girls and no boys in this column. It has been brought to the attention of the staff that since boys are naturally shy, retiring creatures, we should not force them to talk about themselves every month. So, boys, you can crawl safely back in your shell as the spotlight is off you for awhile.

Martha Dixon gets first place this time as after this semester she will be an addition to the student body of High Point and a subtraction from our own. Several campus activities are going to miss Martha when she is gone, because she gives her heart and soul to whatever she decides to do.

Last year and this year, Martha was in the Glee club, Dramatics club and the Ministerial club. She played basketball on the varsity last year, but since she leaves in the middle of the season this time she has to be content to watch from the sidelines. However, in this column she is representing the sophomore volley ball team so her enthusiasm and love for a good game is not totally lost.

In the what does life hold in store for me department, Martha is preparing herself by majoring in Religion and minoring in Primary Education. She will probably always find time for her hobby, ceramics, too.

Good luck to you at High Point, Martha.

If you have lived around Asheville and are interested in music, you will probably guess right away who this freshman is. She sings, dances, plays ping pong, likes softball and basketball and vice presidents of student bodies, has red hair and answers to the name of Dean.

Wylladene Duckett is her full name, but Dean is what everyone calls her. At the age of fifteen she decided to be a singer and soon she was starting at the bottom of the scale (no pun intended) singing at the Waldorf Astoria in New York. Of course to most people singing at the Waldorf wouldn't be exactly starting at the bottom, but Dean, who has visions of the Metropolitan Opera stage in her eyes is looking toward the future and not the past. While the Met is preparing for Dean, she plans to teach music or be a director of a church choir.

Taylor Hall's authority on style is Lila Burgess. Lila does not aim to please, she's trying to set you on your ear. Lila was an art major last year and often says wistfully that she would like to be a fashion designer, but having a mad desire to eat regularly, she is learning shorthand and typing.

Martha Dixon, Wylladene Duckett, Lila Burgess and Faye Smith star in the picture for this issue. They represent the three volley ball teams.

Lila makes a hobby of drawing, sewing, collecting tea cups, and fishing. She has won numerous art contests. In the sports department, Lila admits that she is not very athletically minded, but she likes baseball and basketball best. While in high school she was in a beauty contest sponsored by the Boy's club.

Faye Smith is the day student from Brevard with the Virginian accent. She is majoring in business but many people think that with her voice she should be majoring in music.

Faye was on the Horace Heidt show in 1950 along with two oth-

ON THE COURT

By NANCY CARSON

Have you seen the Brevard Hurricanes? No doubt you have been hearing this—just to let you in on a little secret—the Hurricane is the name of the girl's basketball team. These females won't be outdone.

The Hurricanes got off to a good start by defeating the Etowah high school team by a large margin. This was a rough game but there was some good playing done by both sides.

Doris Ferguson was high scorer for Brevard. Jenny Lou Morris played well at either position, guard or forward. Anne Cudd was especially good in the guarding position. Ellen Torrence, a newcomer to the first string has proved herself worthy of her advancement. Celia Sherrill, a newcomer to basketball itself, handles the ball like a veteran, and is always in there fighting. Faye Smith, nicknamed "Frog" for the way she leaps into the air to get the rebounds or to shoot for the basket is also playing a fine game. Hilda Norwood, also a newcomer, will, no doubt, be playing some good ball if she keeps on improving.

Betty Lee Starnes—Miss Moseley would find it hard to coach a team without a Starnes on it. For the last three years a member of the Starnes generation has played for her. Betty Lee has held up the name perfectly. Lillian Carney—Called "Charleston" on the court, has played fine ball and no doubt will play even better when the season really gets underway. Evelyn Ledford is another Casar girl who plays some superb ball. One thing I'd like to know—does everyone in Casar play ball? Nancy Carson is also present.

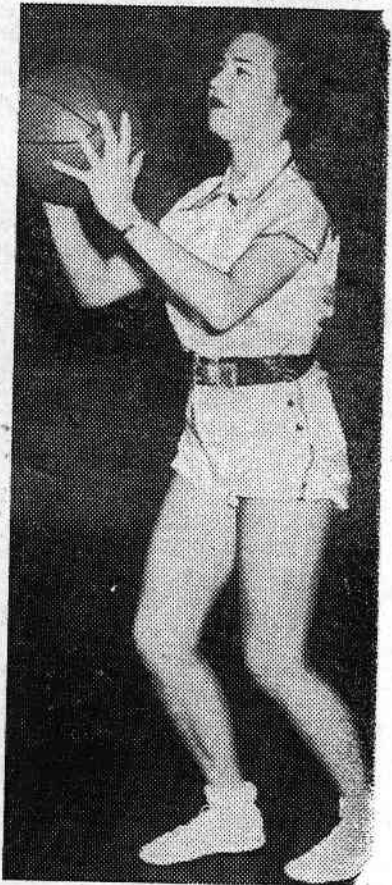

If you see a girl wearing a raccoon cap and carrying a bag of oranges, don't shoot it. She's our manager, June Craft.

Wednesday night we donned our new uniforms and proceeded to romp over Etowah by a score of 28 to 12. The new uniforms helped the team's playing as well as its appearance.

The girls will not be playing in South Carolina this season which means that the girls will not get to play their old foes, Spartanburg.

ers which compose the original Bluzzettes. When she came to Brevard another trio of Bluzzettes were started and they had a program every week on station WPNF.

At Brevard Faye has joined the Dramatics club, Commercial club, Glee club. She is also a cheerleader, and on the basketball team. Faye is one of the reasons the sophomores and day students are in a play-off for the volley ball championship.

Ellen Torrence, the new basketball uniforms. She plays a fast game as guard on the first string.

The reason for this is that the rules in South Carolina are so different and have been speeded up to such an extent that it is almost like a boy's game and our team has not been trained for that kind of game.

See you next time, but before that I'll probably see you on the court.

Sarratt's Cleaners

Morgan Street

Dial TU 2-1021

CREST STORES

SEAL TEST

ICE CREAM — MILK

For the latest and best in movie entertainment — visit the

Co-Ed & Clemson Theaters