Quizzing The Kids

Each issue of the Clarion from this date on will contain the views of students on this campus concerning certain issues of interest. An attempt will be made to pick items of particular interest and importance to the whole student body. If you have any suggestions, let someone on the staff know about them.

The topic for this month is:

What do you think of student government on our campus?

Gardner Helms: The student government, in my opinion, was pretty sorry last year, but the prospects for a good one this year certainly seem much better. I think that before long every Brevard student will recognize and appreciate the job his student government is doing. If properly run, the student government can become a great institution; but it cannot achieve anything unless it is allowed to exercise its right to govern the student body.

Pat Lackey: I think that student government on campus is the most outstanding organization any college campus could ever have. If it was not for the student government, some of us would go astray; but with the fine student leaders we have, it would be almost impossible for us to do so. I think the student government should have the power to express and to enforce new rules at any time and the power to punish those who break those rules. I think that most all the students respect and look to the student government as a guide throughout their college life.

Larry Davis: Our future as the freshmen class at Brevard will be determined by our participation in our student government activities. We will sacrifice our respect and influence as a class if we allow ourselves to be apathetic or superficial about any issues in which we are involved.

Beth Jones: Student government is essential on any college campus. Here it is not as efficient as it could be. The student government should serve as the head of the self-governing student body. In order for a student body to be self-

Former College Pres. Dies On October 4

The flag flew half-mast at Brevard college from Monday, October 5, through the following Sunday in honor of A. C. Reynolds, Sr., whose death at 11 a. m. on October 4, ended one of the most famous careers in education that this state has ever known.

Reynolds was at one time president of old Rutherford college, which played such an important role in the history of Brevard college. Therefore, his name will go down in history as one of the leaders in the foundation of this college. It was Rutherford college that joined with Weaverville college in 1934 to move to the present site of Brevard college.

During Mr. Reynolds' lifetime, he was responsible for founding Biltmore college (now Asheville-Biltmore) and was president of Cullowhee Normal and Industrial school, which is now Western Carolina college.

He was also the grandfather of Miss Anne Cowan, a member of the Brevard college staff.

governing, an honor policy should be put into effect, with student government at the head. There should be a set constitution for this policy, with student government in control of drawing up this constitution, which the student body should understand and vote into (and enforcing punishment for violation of the policy). Only then will student government become completely effective on this campus.

Nick Williams: If carried out effectively student government can be extremely useful in the student-faculty relationship. However, if affairs which apply to the student government are not handled by the government, it will tend to lower it in esteem among the student body and lead eventually to the downfall of the student government. Rules and judgments handed down without action by the student council will only weaken the effectiveness of rules, judgments, actions, et cetera, which are passed by the council. If allowed to operate freely, student government can evolve into a program which will be beneficial to the interest of everyone.

Sophia Steffan Will Appear In Person

Miss Sophia Steffan, mezzo-soprano, will appear at the Brevard college auditorium on November 3 in the second of a series of lyceum programs.

Miss Steffan is from High Point, North Carolina. While a pupil at High Point she received a scholarship to Julliard school of music in New York City. She has won various awards for her music including the Samuel Goodman award in voice.

She has toured with the Grass Roots Opera company, singing the title role of "Carmen" under the direction of A. J. Fletcher. She has also appeared as Azucena in "Il Trovatore" with the Raleigh Opera association.

Miss Steffan's debut as a soloist was made with the Transylvania summer symphony orchestra under the direction of James Christian Pfohl.

She is now continuing her studies with Lottie Lenord in New York City.

Bonnie Lassies Slash Out Terrific Scores

While the boys took over on the regular diamond, the girls improvised a field for softball intramurals just beyond the science building. Despite the drawback of tall grass and close buildings, the girls played superb ball.

The four teams participating were the Blue Blazes, the sophomore team under the management of Nancy Setzer; three freshmen teams, the Hot Canaries, Sally Ty-singer; Red Devils, Margaret Hennessee; and the Green Hornets, Pat Green.

Scheduled for the first game, the Green Hornets upset the sophomore Blue Blazes, 9 to 5. The second game saw the Red Devils on the short end of a 20 to 2 game with the Hot Canaries. The sophomores struck back in the third game to put the Red Devils out of play by a tilted score of 25 to 4. Keeping their record clean, the Green Hornets took the fourth game from the Hot Canaries 10 to 2.

The playoffs saw the Blue Blazes again facing the Green Hornets, this time for first place. As before, the Green Hornets came through on the top side of an 18 to 8 score to claim the championship. The second, and final game of the playoffs, which determined second place winner, was taken by the Blue Blazes from the Hot Canaries, 14 to 13.

Not wishing to show partiality to one particular player, for all the girls played fine ball and showed good sportsmanship, we don't think we should overlook the expert pitching of Joan Wilson, a member of the Green Hornet team. Nice going, Joan, and we're sure we'll be seeing more of you on other sport courts.

Sports Session

The intramural program planned for the college this year started with a bang.

Four softball teams were formed and the season got underway. There was plenty of fire between the teams and plenty of spirit. When the season finished, two teams were tied for first and two for third.
