

WHEE! . . . and Corky Nash goes into orbit as he and unidentified friend test the trampoline at Camp High Rock on the Mountaineers over-night camping trip last week-end. The Mountaineers (upper right) pose for our cameraman before they load up for the short trip to the camp. Lynn Wells and Bob Clontz (lower right) got a free ride from Steve Clark but it was just a "little" bumpy. A few Clios and their dates (lower left) gathered by the old-fashioned fireplace at Camp Deerwoode last Saturday at their picnic and dance. Little cold for a cook-out, huh Clios?

Book Review— The Reivers

By ROBIN MAY

The Reivers, a classic created by William Faulkner, follows the adventures of Lucius Priest, an eleven-year-old Mississippi boy, in the early 20th century when an automobile was still a novelty.

The action begins when Lucius and two of his friends "borrow" his grandfather's car and exchange it in Memphis for a race horse that won't run. They meet Boon Hogganbeck, an uneducated Negro stable hand who has an unquenchable curiosity, and life becomes complicated as they try to justify their escapades and realize that they cannot escape the consequences of most of them.

The Mississippi River valley country of sixty years ago moves before the reader with great reality as Faulkner uses his familiar provincial dialogue to recreate the scene with characters who are typical of the 1960's. The Reivers is filled with involved, suspenseful, comical adventures of youth that only Faulkner could create.

Classes To Recess

tion in Asheville Sunday at 10:00 P.M. and return to Brevard via the Airports and Railroad Stations.

The charge for these trips will be $1.50 each way. Those wishing to have transportation must file this non-refundable fee with the business office (Mrs. Monteith or Mrs. Pace) indicating the trip or trips for which the fee is being filed. The Deadline for this fee will be Tuesday, 12:00 noon, November 20.

Students are requested not to ask Dean Roberts or any instructor to excuse them from classes or to rearrange their schedule before or after the holiday period. Only students who live outside the continental limits of the U. S. may extend their recess by special arrangement.

Loflin Conducts Library Survey

Statistics compiled from student circulation revealed that 1,673 more students had used 555 more books during the month of October than had been used at the end of October of last year.

The Brevard College library now contains a sum total of 17,618 books with subscriptions for 99 magazines and 6 newspapers contributing to the facilities.

Recently, Whit Loflin discovered in a survey conducted as an assignment in English 15, that the majority of the 16 students to whom he talked wanted the library hours increased from as much as an hour on weeks days to four hours on Saturday. The library now stays open 62 hours a week.

Mrs. Holder, librarian, said that the hours could not be increased because of the limited number of library staff members. She did suggest, however, that more students use the library in the mornings and afternoons rather than waiting until 7:00 P.M.
