

BREVARD'S MODEL U.N. delegation — Jim Holder, Cheryl Greene, Carroll Goodman, Caroline Lobban, and Jaime Ruiz—departing for Duke University.

IN MEMORIUM

There is an empty spot on the grass in front of the Campus Center Building. It was once occupied by a friend of the college, a friend who, although he never spoke a word or did anything especially noteworthy, was nonetheless as much a part of Brevard College as Dunham Hall. He will be missed by the student, the faculty, everybody. The Martins, especially, are saddened at his passing. You see, he was not only their friend, he was their guard and was practically their master in some respects.

Yes, Jack is dead. He died a week ago, of old age mostly. He had been a member of the Martin family for over eight years, and was given to them by a married student of the college. He had been, too, a part of the campus for those eight years. Jack took up his position in front of the CCB early in the morning, and left, it seems, only after classes were finished in the evenings. He never bothered to grace the campus with his presence during the summer months when there were no students around. However, he was always on hand at least by registration day in the fall. He seemed to belong to everybody, and yet, you instinctively knew who his masters were.

Yes, Jack is gone, and we shall miss him.

in town at the first Polio Clinic, please attend the clinic at the college February 25 instead of in town February 23.

Note to New Students and any who may have missed the first clinic: Dr. Folger, the Medical Director of the Polio Clinics, advises to begin with the second clinic at the college February 25, then the third clinic here April 7, and obtain the first polio vaccine at a later date.

We have been asked to participate in the great movement to "Wipe Out Polio." This is a national effort to protect everyone (some who would not contract polio may be carriers) against this dread disease. A recent release shows that paralytic cases account for about 85% of the total cases reported in 1963.

To See Is To Act

As a delegate to the recent session of the Model U.N. General Assembly, I was reminded of the amazing ability of people—and youth particularly—to arise to, and act upon, the situations at hand.

It is a particular habit of many people on the birthdays or memorial days honoring great men to comment, "I wonder what Abe Lincoln or General Washington or so-and-so would say if he could see us now?"

Chances are if these men could see our world today, they wouldn't know what to say. Such men were great because they knew what was going on in their time. They had a keen sense of insight, and their actions, which we acclaim today, were relative to that time. To take them out of their eras and face them with the unique situations of our world would put them in an almost foreign environment.

It has often been my opinion, as an observer, that the forces of government were sometimes intolerably slow in taking a course of action. But after observing and participating in a mock body such as the Model Assembly, I was forced to admit that even a small decision on the part of a representative body is a large accomplishment.

The students who made up the various delegations displayed vigor and enthusiasm, as well as a knowledge of the individual countries which they represented. The delegates also seemed to understand the mechanics and operation of power politics, the ever-present force behind government.

Every student should have the privilege of participating in such a mock session of government. If it served no other purpose than that of enlightenment and appreciation it would be well worth the time and effort. We could then stop asking "What would our predecessors say?" and ask, instead, "What can we say when he see ourselves?"

Letters To The Editor

February 4, 1964

Dear Sponsors:

Again the new year has come. First of all, I pray to God for all of your peace and happiness. The members of my family are fine here thanks to your good help and good wishes for us.

Recently I read in the newspaper that there were heavy snowfall in the eastern part of the United States. The news said that many people were killed by the heavy snowfall. I hope you did not have such heavy snowfall. During this winter season, we did not have much snow yet and the weather is warm. I am having winter vacation and so I am studying at home these days. Before the beginning of this winter vacation, I wished to have lots of fun while playing in the snow but owing to this warm weather, I failed to have the fun. This winter season is not over and so I still have some hope.

Although this is winter vacation, I often meet my teacher to study. As a token of my thanks to you, I am trying to study harder all the time.

In March this year, I will be in 6th grade of primary school. If I want to enter middle school next year, I must study very hard from this new year. From now on, I must save every penny in order to use for my school tuition when I enter middle school next year. I will try to build better health too. Wishing all of you peace and good health. I close here for this time.

Truly yours,
Yoon, Yung Hwan

Members of the Sophomore class met with representatives from senior colleges, Thursday, February 13, to get information on the colleges they may attend next year. The representatives left that afternoon at 2:30, after having consulted with many sophomores.

Roberts asks to borrow a lawn mower from Miles, which he used on his golf putting green. Roberts tells Miles to raise the blade in order for him to cut regular lawn grass. Roberts also tells Miles he will pay him $5.00 for the use of the mower. While Roberts is cutting the grass, the blade strikes some glass and severely cuts his leg. The blade was found not raised. Could Roberts sue Miles for damages and collect?

On Friday, February 28, an informal recital will be presented in the form of a Voice Workshop directed by Mr. Harvey Miller. It will be held at 6:30 P.M., in room 108 of the Music Building.

All music students should find this program of interest. Everyone is invited.
