Mock Election Gives Demos Victory

The Johnson-Humphrey ticket was the winner in the Brevard College "mock election" held on October 26, 1964, in which 75 per cent of students, faculty, and staff revealed their choice for the next president of the United States.

The total count was Johnson-Humphrey, 189 votes; Goldwater-Miller, 111 votes. Sixty-three per cent of all those who voted were for LBJ with the remaining 37 per cent casting their votes for Goldwater. The female population of the college favored Goldwater with 51 per cent voting Republican and 49 per cent backing the Democratic candidates. The men, however, were divided 55 per cent for Johnson and 45 per cent for Goldwater.

Three times as many male faculty members cast their votes for Johnson, and the female faculty was 60 per cent also in favor of the present president.

One-hundred per cent of the male staff voted Democratic and the female members of the staff followed with a 75 per cent majority.

The students were more closely divided on the subject with 56 per cent for LBJ and 44 per cent voting Goldwater. It was interesting to find that the students who voted Democratic followed their parents' political affiliation by more than a two to one majority, while the Republican supporting students were equally divided as to parents' voting habits.

The returns of November 3 will tell us whether Brevard College has a good cross section of the voters of the nation.

President McLarty Writes PERTELOTE

One of the truly great sayings about a college president is, "Generally speaking, a college president is generally speaking!" Yours is no exception, only doctor's orders restrict this characteristic attitude, so I shall take advantage of the Clarion editor's gracious invitation, and write a few words of greetings to the students.

I was asked to write something about my convalescence which has kept me under "house arrest" so far during this semester. Wasting good Clarion space writing about myself is a trifle awkward, but here goes. Various queer sensations caused me to arrange for a medical check-up just before the beginning of the fall semester, and this revealed a slight variance in the electro cardiogram test that required some small amount of medication and a large amount of rest. Two months of this routine is apparently working, for most of the pointer readings that are relied upon in these circumstances reveal that most of the trouble has been eliminated. A part-time schedule is now permitted, and I am eagerly awaiting the time when full responsibilities may be resumed.

Never in the approximately eight years of serving as President of Brevard College have I been more proud of the College than now. The student body, faculty, and staff constitute the finest college community the College has ever boasted. It seems that almost everyone has gone the extra mile in making it so. The Visiting Committee from the Southern Association, which inspected every nook and corner of our total program spoke in glowing terms of the college spirit they found. There is no limit to the good which may be accomplished where this atmosphere persists. It is most gratifying to learn that the students themselves show a pride in their college and in their work. We are all interested in a better Brevard College, and I proffer my sincere appreciation to each and all of you for your efforts along this line.

No one knows better than I that there is plenty of room for improvement. The Visiting Committee has pointed out several ways we can improve, and certain changes are already being implemented to assure these improvements.

All in all, we are off to a good start in this fall semester. Soon it will be history, and I believe it will be a chapter in the continuing story of Brevard College which we shall be able to look upon with pride.

PERTELOTE

HONOR

Thanks to the hard work of Editor Richard Jones and his staff, the 1964 Pertelote has been awarded (as was the 1963 Pertelote) a first-place rating in the Yearbook Critique and Contest. Mrs. C. E. Roy, advisor to the yearbook staff, received the following citation: "The Pertelote has been awarded this FIRST PLACE CERTIFICATE in the thirteenth annual yearbook critique and contest conducted by the Association at Columbia University in the City of New York, October 9, 1964."

The award was made by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. This is a professional organization of more than 2,000 teacher-advisors. It was organized in 1927 to further the development and expansion of the school press field in accordance with accepted educational practices.

The Pertelote scored 891 points out of a possible 1,000. A score of 850 is required for a first-place certificate.

Primarily a critique for the yearbook or the class book, the contest provides a periodic rating on a nationwide basis by a board of experienced judges. Advisors in the field, printers, engravers, photographers, paper and cover manufacturers are consulted in the study.

The Critique aims to stimulate student interest and activity and to contribute to the betterment of the book. The growth of the number of entrants in the contest gives testimony to the value

Hardesty Is In New York

Brevard College Director of Admissions, Glenn Hardesty, will attend a College Entrance Examination Board meeting in New York City on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 3-4. This annual meeting of College Board representatives, held at the Hotel

Commodore, will be the second attended by Brevard College, which was accepted last year as a member of this board.

Various meetings are on Mr. Hardesty's schedule. Slated are group discussions concerning scholarships and student financial aid.
