signed and directed toward the realization of these goals. On the other hand, I would have you believe that Brevard College has no rules designed to repress or stultifying your self-expression or individuality. It is a belief dear to me that meaningful existence is possible only when measured against standards, and that failure to act responsibly annihilates individuality. Shorn of all certainties, time cries out for valid guidelines to living. It is our earnest desire at Brevard College that you will join with us in our conscientious search for meaningful values and lasting fulfillment.

The second principle, relating to student welfare — physical and social, is necessary to fulfillment to the first. Student morale is an important adjunct to education, and it is the desire of the college that your stay here be as pleasant and amiable as possible. No expense has been spared in providing you with a physical environment you can be proud of, and you will witness every day further improvements being made. I hope you will feel free to bring to me any complaints you have about our physical facilities.

The social aspect of student living is one of the most meaningful and complicating elements in the college experience. While it is obvious that the most significant part of college is academic, it is equally true that the friends you make here, the activities in which you participate become elements of your experience you will carry with you forever. The problem for the college administrator becomes, therefore, a matter of keeping the academic and social aspects of college balanced, making it possible for the individual student to achieve maximum benefits from both areas. It is for this reason that social regulations are relatively strict during the time of classes and relaxed on weekends. While the college encourages social activities it should be noted here that the primary responsibility for initiation of social activity rests with the students. The social chairman of your student government association will, therefore, welcome your individual suggestions.

As dean of students I welcome you to Brevard College and wish for you a successful year and a period of profound personal enrichment. I look forward to meeting you and being of what service I can. In the meantime be assured of the sincere interest in you held by every member of the Brevard College family.

SPORTS

Brevard College as a member of the Western Junior College Conference. This league is made up of seven colleges: Lees McRae, Gardner - Webb, Wingate, Anderson, North Greenville and Spartanburg and Brevard. In addition the athletic program is governed by the National Junior College Athletic Association.

Seven intercollegiate sports are sponsored by the college. They are soccer, cross country, basketball, baseball, track, golf and tennis.

Mr. Thad Talley, an outstanding track and cross country runner at Furman University, will take over the duties of coaching track and cross country. In addition to his coaching duties Coach Talley will teach full time in the physical education department.

Brevard College constitutes a special community of persons (administration, faculty and students) who are engaged in serious pursuit of knowledge, its meaning and value for life, and its application for the benefit of all. Our religious faith and emphasis demand that we give our best to this task.

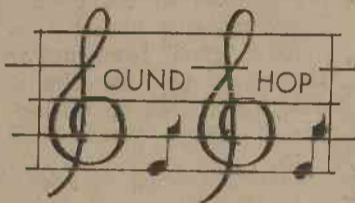

The College provides many opportunities for worship and study which enrich the minds and spirits of persons. Students are encouraged to continue their active relationship with their respective churches in town and participate in denominational
