Nemos And Delphians

Monday night, Feb. 5, Delphians elected the court for the annual Sweetheart Dance to be held Feb. 17. Three Sophomores — Brenda Wyke, Pat McCorkle, and Susie Darlington and two Freshmen — Hazel Chapman and Leia Elg—were chosen to represent the court. The selection came from a list presented by the Nemos. Brenda Wyke, Sue Shad, Sue Anderson, Margie Tricolli, Susie Darlington, and Pat McCorkle were the sophomore nominees. Susan Brandt, Linda Dease, Leia Elg, Mary Newcomer, and Hazel Chapman represented the freshman class. The queen will be chosen from the sophomore girls and crowned at the dance.

Drama Club

The "Masquers" announce that their next presentation will be the Broadway Musical, "Half a Sixpence." George Patterson, club president, said that it will be presented Sat. and Sun., April 27 and 28, in the college Drama Barn.

Miss Taylor will direct the action while Mr. Adams is in charge of the music.

Book Store-Soda Shop Personnel Are Priceless

Perhaps one of the services of Brevard College deemed most valuable by the students is the college book store and soda shop located in the Dunham Fine Arts Building. The students will readily agree that the store has a very reliable and capable staff of college employees and students.

Mr. Jimmy Alderman of Brevard is looked upon as the jovial and always-willing-to-help store manager. Mr. Alderman, formerly featured in the CLARION, is in the Air Force Reserve and has two children. His wife, Mabel, is the Assistant Director of Public Relations for the college.

Always lending a helping hand to students when the need arises is Mrs. Laverne McCall, assistant store manager. Mrs. McCall has been with the Brevard College staff for eight years. Her husband, Mr. J. D. McCall, was Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds for twelve years. Mrs. McCall is a resident of Brevard and has one "growing boy."

Eight students are currently employed in the store. They represent different locales and add a pinch of hospitality and courtesy in serving the student and non-student customers.

Two recent additions to the staff are freshman Gary Trotter of Brevard and Emily Gal-

Diane Ritchie Is In Student Spotlight

It's been said that brains and beauty are a woman's greatest assets, and Diane Ritchie is lucky enough to possess them both. Hailing from Petersburg, Virginia, this vivacious and friendly sophomore is known by everyone.

When not working on SGA as social chairman, Dianne participates in Euterps, Big Sisters, and heads the Inter-Club Council. Music also takes up much of Dianne's time as she is chapel organist and an accompanist.

Because of her bubbling personality, poise, and beauty, Diane has won many titles. Among these are Homecoming Queen, May Court, Miss Freshman, Miss Tri-City, and Miss Photogenic loway of Kannapolis, N. C.

Emily initiates women suffrage around the campus as she becomes the first woman student to be employed at the store. She attended Northwest Cabarrus High School in Kannapolis and is majoring in elementary education. With the large addition of Revlon cosmetics to the store, Emily has assumed the position as an aid to any coed who perhaps can not seem to find the right shade of lipstick. Blond-haired Emily is very popular around campus and is often seen in the company of Tony Felthaus.

A Brevard resident and day student, Gary Trotter has also joined the staff. Gary attended Brevard High and served as a nuclear weapons specialist in the United States Air Force. He was stationed in Colorado, California, and England and occasionally relates some of his experiences to students, especially to — Barbara Brookshire. Gary, a freshman, is on the honor roll and has plans of entering the engineering field after college.

It's not unusual for an all round girl like "Ritch" as called by her friends, to have many favorites. Among these are tennis, horse-back riding, and eating caramel corn. Her favorite subjects are social dancing and psychology, and her favorite teacher is Mr. Adams. Diane loves traveling and meeting interesting people. This summer she hopes to work at Hemisfair '68, a small world's fair in Texas.

When not being kidded about her Virginia accent, Diane may be found walking up "Mouse" and "Jat" or just being a friend to all.

Diane feels that Brevard College has much potential. "It gives you a chance to find out what you really want to do."

As far as the future is concerned, Diane hopes to attend William and Mary College and major in education. After completing her education at William and Mary, she plans to enter Tobe Coburn Fashion School in New York and become a fashion co-ordinator.

Energetic and vivacious, ambitious and determined, Miss Diane Ritchie is on her way to the top.

Jim Harbin can be seen often in the store sorting mail or helping someone at the fountain. Jim attended Cary High in East-West all star game two years ago. He is a sophomore, an asset to the Beam I and II intramural teams, and plans to attend UNC.

A Franklin, N. C. native, John Hurst also joined the ranks of the store personnel. John played basketball while at Franklin and is a member of the Delphian Society on campus.

John Copes van Hasselt of Hague, Holland, adds an international flavor to the staff. John likes to travel and enjoys skiing and mountain climbing.

Friendliness Impresses Brevard Visitors

Prospective students and their parents, who visit the Brevard College campus, usually leave with a feeling of warmth and good will toward the college. This is due in most part to the friendliness and helpfulness of Brevard College students.

The parents are especially interested in the size of the classes, the ratio of students to teachers, the physical facilities, the number of volumes in the library, transportation in and out of Brevard, and student restrictions.

The prospective student inquires about dorm rules, keeping a car on campus, his chances in college if he is an average student, Christmas and spring vacations, food, where does he wash his clothes, sports, student activities, and the ratio of boys to girls in the student body.

All these questions are answered during an average Brevard College campus tour. The guide answers some of the questions, but the students usually answer most of them in the course of the tour. The guide only gives direction and soon one or more of the students take the visitor in tow, answering questions as they go. There is always the scramble to find a room in one of the dorms, which, by the students standards, is presentable for showing the prospective student where he will spend much of his time. The students are cooperative and helpful even though they have had no notice of the visit. They exhibit an interest in the visitor and a contagious enthusiasm for Brevard College.

Visitors to the campus are generally interested in the Chelf Mineral and Gem Collection housed in the science building. They ask if these specimens are indigenous to this area. The answer is, "Not all are to be found in North Carolina, but there is a wealth of minerals and gem stones to be found within a hundred mile radius of Brevard."

Brevard Music Camp is known nation wide, so most visitors ask if Brevard College is associated with it. The answer is, "No, Brevard College is well known in its own right for its music department. The Glee Club, Wind Ensemble, and Madrigal Singers tour from New York to Florida presenting concerts and creating good will for the college."

The evident growth of Brevard College prompts the question: Are there plans to convert Brevard College to a four-year college? In reply to this question, "No, the aim of Brevard College is to be the best two-year college offering university parallel and specialized courses of study, and giving students the opportunity to find direction in the junior college atmosphere."

The introduction of visitors to Brevard College is a rewarding experience. The greatest asset of the college, its students, give the visitor an impression of friendliness and dedication which is the major influence of their decision to attend and become a part of Brevard College.

RUSH HOUR! Things get pretty hectic behind the soda shop counter when classes are dismissed. Above, Gary Trotter hurriedly concocts a milk shake, Mrs. McCall rings up another sale, and Mr. Alderman expostulates on the merits of the Babe Ruth candy bar.

and first semester President of the freshman class, Wayne Morton adds a note from South Carolina. Wayne attended West-School near Raleigh and played football in the North Carolina High in Westminster and currently serves as a Delphian and staff member of the PERTELOTE and the CLARION.

Another member of the track team is Mike Fagan, a Gainesville, Florida product. Mike is very active on campus and holds the position of President of the Clisophic Society. Dennis Bauknight, of Easley, South Carolina, known as "Fige", adds an often humorous twist to the daily happenings in the store. "Fige" attended Easley High and has plans of finishing his college career at Clemson University where his father is a professor.

Service with a personality is always the practice of the staff of the college store. They add much to the community life of Brevard College.
